Ronald Riccio appointed new dean of law school

Ronald J. Riccio was appointed dean of Seton Hall's School of Law, effective July 1. Monsignor John J. Petillo, the University chancellor, announced the appointment in May.

Riccio has definite plans for the law school's future. Among those plans is helping to supervise construction of a new law school building in Newark, maintaining and adding to the excellent faculty, establishing endowments and chairs, as well as scholarships for minorities, and increasing the alumni's involvement in the law school. The new dean strongly believes in the positive influence of Catholic education and, indeed, the law school's new chaplain, Monsignor Harold Darcy, now has an office at the school and will celebrate daily Masses for those students who wish to attend.

Riccio was born and raised in Jersey City, attending Our Lady of Victories School in Jersey City and St. Michael's High School in Union City.

Attending college on a baseball scholarship, he earned his B.A. in history with honors from Seton Hall University, and in 1968 received a medal from the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference for athletic and academic achievement. His J.D. is from Seton Hall Law School, where he was a member of the Law Review. After law school, Riccio served a judicial clerkship for U.S. District Court Judge Lawrence A. Whipple. He was a partner for more than 15 years in the firm of Robinson, Wayne, Levin, Riccio and LaSala in Newark and is a highly regarded trial and appellate lawyer.

Construction to begin on new law school building

Plans are under way to begin construction of a new Seton Hall Law Center complex covering approximately 200,000 square feet on the site of the current law school in Newark. Bellemead Development Corporation of Roseland will construct the complex. The University has entered into a separate agreement with Bellemead in which ownership of the current four-acre site transfers to Bellemead in return for property almost double the acreage in Roseland. A new office building on the Roseland site will also be owned by the University. Leasing the building will generate income to help offset the $25 to $28 million cost of constructing the new law school.

While the University received favorable tax abatements from the city, Newark stands to gain long term returns from payroll and parking taxes as well as projected revenues of $40 million in lieu of taxes.

Law School Dean Ronald Riccio and University Chancellor Monsignor John Petillo estimate a Spring 1991 opening for the new law school and at least one office tower. As plans stand now, the complex will house the law school and two office towers, as well as an adjoining retail plaza. The city has pledged parking facilities.

The decision to stay in Newark is quite understandable. Newark is an important legal hub with New Jersey's busiest state and federal courts, state appellate courts and the U.S. attorney's office all in residence. The Newark Legal and Communications Center is now under construction in the busy downtown area as well. With state-of-the-art academic and library facilities, the new Seton Hall Law Center promises to be one of the most modern and highly visible law school's in the country.

Law school chaplain appointed

Monsignor Harold P. Darcy was named chaplain to the law school in June. Monsignor Darcy was ordained on December 8, 1954 in Rome, Italy. He earned his J.C.D. degree, summa cum laude, from Gregorian University in Rome in 1960, his S.T.L. degree in Systemic Theology, magna cum laude, from Gregorian University in Rome in 1955, and his B.A. degree in Classical Languages and Philosophy, magna cum laude, from Seton Hall University in 1951.

He was an honorary prelate in 1971 and chaplain of His Holiness in 1962.

Monsignor Darcy has served as pastor of Notre Dame Parish in North Caldwell since 1979. He also served as rector of the North American College in Rome, Italy, from 1974 to 1979, and of Immaculate Conception Seminary in Darlington, New Jersey, from 1972 to 1974, where

First woman to head Alumni Association

The newly-elected president of the law school's Alumni Association is the first woman to hold this office in the Association's history. Joan Marie Hopper '80, an assistant corporation counsel for the City of Jersey City, earned her B.A. from the College of Saint Elizabeth in Convent Station and her M.A. from Seton Hall University, as well as her J.D. from the law school. The Association's other officers are: Richard E. Brennan '67, vice president; James F. Mulvihill '71, second vice president; Mario G. Romano '66, secretary and Thomas W. Greelish '71, treasurer. Named to the new position of faculty advisor is Robert W. Diab. The current council members are: Michel F. Baumeister '72, Joseph P. Brennan Jr. '73, Daniel J. Carey '80, Renate A. Coombs '81, W. Hunt Dumont '67, David M. Foley '62, Bernard M. Hartnett Jr., '55, Hon. August W. Heckman (John Marshall '32), Vivian E. King '85, Joseph P. LaSala '72, Allyn Z. Lite '78, Kevin H. Marino '84, John P. McGee '69, Theodore Moskowitz '82, Annamarie V. Paterno (John Marshall '40), Anne M. Perone '82, Harold J. Ruvoldt Sr. (John Marshall '41), John A. Sakson '78, Richard D. Schibell '73, Janyce W. Stahl '84 and Frank J. Vecchione '64.

350 graduate in June

This past June, 350 students graduated from the law school. Acting Dean John B. Wefing looked to the future, reaffirming the graduates' possibilities to achieve great things.

Honorary Doctor of Law degrees were conferred on U.S. District Court Judges Maryanne Trump Barry and Clarkson S. Fisher. Barry urged the graduates to "Go forward and represent the people who turn to you, with every bit of commitment you can muster." Fisher, citing the current debates and controversies in law, reminded the graduates "It's exciting to be practicing law. And it's great to be young and a lawyer."

In closing remarks for the ceremonies, which took place at the Garden State Arts Center in Holmdel, the graduates heard Archbishop Theodore E. McCarrick urge them to be more than mere technicians of the law, as their education would allow them to be leaders.

Rodino appointed visiting professor

Peter W. Rodino Jr.

Congressman Peter W. Rodino Jr., who is retiring after serving 40 years in the House of Representatives, has been appointed as a Distinguished Visiting Professor to the law school. The congressman has also agreed to donate his papers, including those from the Watergate hearings, to the law school archives. The new law library built in Newark as part of a new Seton Hall Law Center will be named in honor of Rodino. Among his many accomplishments in the House over the years, the congressman served for more than a decade as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. Rodino's term in Congress expires in January and he is expected to devote time to the University beginning next spring.

Faculty and Staff

Professor Daniel C. Knickerbocker Jr. was a speaker at the annual meeting of the American Bar Association, held in Toronto, on a program entitled "ERISA Fiduciary Responsibility."

Professor Margaret Gilhooley visited China and met with officials from the Ministry of Public Health to learn more about pharmaceutical drug regulations in China for added insight in her Food and Drug course. She also published an article in the Administrative Law Review (Spring 1988) entitled "Plain Meaning, Absurd Results and the Legislative Purpose: The Interpretation of the Delaney Clause."

Brenda J. Saunders-Hamden has been promoted to associate professor with tenure at the law school.

Father Daniel A. Degnan delivered a paper at the Newman Conference, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, entitled: "Newman and Catholic Identity in the Third Era of Catholic Higher Education." He was a lecturer at the Spring 1988 Symposium on Church and State at Seton Hall University and has joined the board of directors of Centurion Ministries. Based in Princeton, this organization works toward freeing from prison those who are completely innocent of the crimes for which they have been wrongly convicted and imprisoned for life.

Professor Lawrence Bershad was appointed by Governor Kean to the New Jersey commission studying benefits to be provided to professional boxers. And the state senate has confirmed the Governor's reappointment of Bershad as a member of the Advisory Council on Corrections.

Professor Paula A. Franzese delivered the keynote address at the Fiftieth Anniversary Convention of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society International. Her presentation was entitled "The Women's Movement: Opportunities of Today, Challenges of Tomorrow." She has been appointed to the Barnard College Alumnae Council and the Columbia Law School Alumni Association board of directors. Her article, "Mount Laurell III: The New Jersey Supreme Court's Judicious Retreat," appeared in the Spring 1988 issue of the Seton Hall Law Review.

Professor Morton Stavis was one of three panelists discussing "Different Perspectives of the United States Constitution" at a public meeting sponsored by the Metropolitan Chapter of The American Jewish Committee (Millburn).

Virginia C. Whipple, director of alumni relations and Sports Law Forum committee member, received a Distinguished Service Award presented at Seton Hall's Fifth Annual Sports Law Symposium.

Professor Joseph Lynch published an article on "McCulloch v. Maryland" in the Volume 18:2 issue of the Seton Hall Law Review.

Professor Martha Traylor presented a paper on "Regulation of Biotechnology in the United States" at the triennial meeting of the International Political Science Association held in Washington, DC. She also spent time this summer at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, researching highland clan law and its influence on American common law.

Professor William G. Bassler was sworn in as a superior court judge in Monmouth County.

Professor Michael J. Zimmer spoke on the Employment-at-Will panel at Arbitration Day, sponsored by the American Arbitration Association, held at the New York Hilton. His topic was "Statutory Limitations on the At-Will Doctrine." Zimmer and Professor Charles A. Sullivan have published the second edition of Cases and Materials on Employment Discrimination as well as a three-volume treatise entitled Employment Discrimination.

Phyllis C. Dunlop was appointed director of development at the law school on January 1, 1988. Prior to that she served as director of Annual Funds for the University for three years. Phyllis is a graduate of Dickinson College and is currently completing her MBA at Seton Hall University.

Lori San Giacomo was appointed assistant director of alumni relations at the law school in December 1987. She had previously been the consultant for special projects for one year here at the law school. Lori is a graduate of the University of Maryland and is currently enrolled in the MBA program at Seton Hall University.

Alumni Tracks

A recent study of the law school's alumni has found: 74 judges, seven chief county prosecutors, over 1000 partners in prominent law firms, over 100 assistant county prosecutors, two former U.S. attorneys for the district of New Jersey and one current New Jersey state attorney general.

Wilfredo Caraballo was recently appointed associate dean.

Greetings Alumni:

As a new school year begins, the Alumni Association is gearing up for an exciting and busy year.

The success of the Alumni Association over the years is due in large part to the great wealth of legal scholarship and achievement attained by our graduates. Seton Hall Law School is justly proud of the commitment and contribution of our alumni to the legal profession. Distinguished members of our Alumni Association are federal court judges, New Jersey superior court judges, New Jersey attorney general, county prosecutors, counsel to major corporations and partners in large law firms. This great tradition continues as our young alumni add their accomplishments to the list of those who came before them.

Of course, the major project this year is the building of a new law school. Due to Seton Hall's great success as a major law school on the east coast, it has become necessary to expand our facilities. Ground breaking for the new building is expected in the spring of 1989. Your support of this great endeavor is necessary for its success.

The Alumni Association has instituted an Alumni Membership Card for the benefit and convenience of all members. This card will make access to the law school library easier, enabling alumni to have the same borrowing privileges as current students. As you are already aware, this is a great asset, considering the excellent New Jersey section maintained by the library staff, as well as the helpful attitude of the entire staff with research requests. By paying the nominal yearly dues, each alumnus will receive this card and all the benefits it carries.

The programs planned by the Association for this year include activities which advance professional as well as social interests. We have alumni returning to the law school to teach a wide range of continuing legal education courses, including "A Primer on Matrimonial Law for the General Practitioner," to be given by our own Alumni Association First Vice President Richard E. Brennan, and "The New Jersey Municipal Land Use Act" to be taught by Louis J. D'Arminio. These two courses merely represent the beginning of a year-long effort to offer various continuing legal education courses in a variety of areas.

Some of the exciting social events planned for the year include Homecoming featuring our own alumnus, Attorney General Cary Edwards; a reception at the New Jersey State Bar Association Mid-Year Convention; and the Annual Alumni Dinner Dance.

We encourage all alumni to participate in all the fine programs planned and to offer any suggestions and ideas for courses and social events to the Association. This is your Association; it exists to serve you. Its success is dependent on your participation and involvement.

The Alumni Association would like to officially welcome the new dean of the law school, Ron Riccio. May his years of service at the law school continue his example of excellence in legal education and commitment to the values of our legal system.

As president of the Alumni Association, I am honored to have been selected the first woman president. I firmly believe in commitment to the great traditions and values that shaped all of us at Seton Hall, and will do my best to insure that the fine example of those who charted the course of legal excellence before us continues. Best wishes for a great year earmarked by commitment and cooperation.

Law alumni directory to be published

We are pleased to report that a contract has been signed with Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc. to publish a directory of the law school's alumni.

The alumni office will supply Harris with a data base. In the spring you will receive a questionnaire form from Harris to elicit data to be contained in the directory. A second questionnaire will be sent to those who do not respond to the first mailing. In the summer of 1989, Harris will begin to confirm and update directory data with respondents via telephone, as well as try to reach non-respondents.

Alumni contacted will receive an offer from Harris to purchase the directory; approximate delivery date is late 1989. It is, of course, part of our agreement with Harris that the circulation will be strictly limited to alumni of Seton Hall.

We in the alumni office are very excited at the prospect of this useful idea finally becoming a reality. We hope you share our anticipation.

10th Annual Alumni Dinner Dance honors four

Nearly 400 guests attended the law school's 10th Annual Alumni Dinner Dance in February, at the Sheraton Tara in Parsippany. Honorees included former New Jersey governor, the Honorable Richard J. Hughes, and New Jersey Star Ledger reporter Herb Jaffe. Throughout their notable careers, using the forums of their respective fields, both men have been strong advocates of respect for the law. Also honored was Elizabeth F. Defeis who resigned as law school dean earlier this year. Defeis was cited for her leadership over the past five years. The alumni association's Distinguished Graduate Award was presented to Rosemary T. McFadden, president of the New York Mercantile Exchange. A 1977 graduate, McFadden expressed what she felt was a unique dimension given to the study of law at Seton Hall — "a sense of morals and high standards." The event also marked the silver anniversary of the graduating class of 1963.

1800 alumni pledge $680,000 to Annual Fund

This year, for the first time, the alumni phonathon was conducted by an outside organization: Institutional Development Council. The facilities at the IDC Phone Centre in Montclair made possible continuous calling by a group of trained "communicators" ensuring the maximum effort to reach all law school alumni.

Under the supervision of Phyllis Dunlop, director of development at the law school, calling began on March 18 and was completed on July 1.

The results were as follows:

Over $680,000 was pledged by 1800 alumni, double the number who had ever donated in any previous fund year. Including potential corporate matching gifts, the total is $735,000. Two-thirds of the pledges will be paid over the next three years in annual or quarterly installments and the remaining one-third will be received within a year.

Especially impressive was the participation of the Class of 1987. Fifty-five percent of the class made pledges for a total of $24,000. In addition, 42 percent of all previous non-donors pledged a total of $285,000, 38 percent of the final total.

As of July 1, 1988, the close of the 1987/1988 Fund year, the money received and credited to the ninth Annual Fund was as follows:

Money received as of July 1, 1988

	Dollars	Donors
Alumni	$142,025	1044
Corporate Matching Gifts	8,515	54
Friends	6,900	7
	$157,440	1105

The alumni total was 30 percent over that of 1986/1987 with an increase of 81 donors.

Fifth Annual Sports Law Symposium is popular and informative

Once again the major function of Seton Hall's Sports Law Forum proved popular and informative. The 5th annual sports law symposium was held in April at the Gateway Hilton in Newark. Panel discussions focused on problems and opportunities in establishing a sports law/representation practice and the impact of media coverage as sports law emerges. Not surprisingly, collusion among the owners, an often reported issue, was brought to the fore. Tom Seaver, former New York Mets pitcher, spoke of his own negotiating experience before the days of player representation.

Other participants included sportswriters Phil Pepe and Dave Anderson, agent David Fishof, sportscasters Don Criqui and Bill Raftery, as well as sports law attorneys Barry Rona, Kenneth Kunzman, Art Kaminsky, Larry Fleisher and Mel Narol.

Keynote speaker George Steinbrenner (principal owner of the New York Yankees baseball team for those of you reading this in Rangoon) had no problem with speaking for almost an hour about himself, the Yankees in general,

Billy Martin and Dave Winfield in particular, and his guidelines for a foreign policy, in which the U.S. puts an end to foreign aid "until every kid in this country is assured of a quality education." Also in attendance was Peter J. Carlesimo, who led Seton Hall University's basketball team to the NCAA Tournament. Carlesimo

Alum named MAAC commissioner

Richard J. Ensor '87 was named commissioner of the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference in August, the third commissioner in the league's eight-year history. For the past two years, Ensor has been an assistant professor in the Sports Management Department at the University of Massachusetts, where his concentration was on sports marketing and sports law. He earned a master's in sport management from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, in 1983.

A 1975 graduate of St. Peter's College, the 35 year-old Ensor has held a number of athletic administrative positions. Among them, assistant director of the Recreation Life Center at St. Peter's College, assistant athletic director at St. Louis University, sports received a much deserved Distinguished Service Award.

Symposium co-directors Lawrence Bershad and Richard J. Regan, as well as the Forum's student committee members, successfully pulled together just the right elements to produce an invigorating meeting — by turns thoughtful and entertaining.

information director at St. Peter's College and assistant athletic director for marketing and promotions at Seton Hall University, where he spearheaded the school's sports marketing strategy in 1986.

At the MAAC, Ensor will be in charge of the administration and marketing efforts of the eight-team (Army, Fairfield, Fordham, Holy Cross, Iona, La Salle, Manhattan, St. Peter's) league, which sponsors 15 championships throughout the academic year.

Ensor earned his J.D. from the law school in 1987 and was admitted into the New Jersey Bar in June of that year. He and his wife Deirdre, who is a registered nurse and NCAA drug-testing crew chief, are the parents of a three-month-old daughter, Kaitlin.
