Mark your calendar for this year's 7th Annual Petersheim Academic Exposition 2003! The exposition will take place Saturday, 5 April - Tuesday, 8 April 2003.

Named in honor of one of Seton Hall's own – Matthew Petersheim, Ph.D., associate professor of chemistry, who died in October 1998 after a battle with cancer – The Petersheim Academic Exposition is a celebration of the scholastic accomplishments and interests of the entire Seton Hall University community. It involves hundreds of undergraduate and graduate students, faculty members, and administrators. Students participate through their class projects, present their work in research symposia, poster sessions, theatrical performances, art exhibits, debates, concerts and more. In addition, many honor societies conduct their induction ceremonies at the Exposition. Attached is the 2002 At-A-Glance scheduling which reveals how the Exposition theme “Bringing Knowledge to Life” was presented last year.

For more information, you may visit the Website: <http://artsci.shu.edu/acadexpo> as further details will be forthcoming.
