Find Missioners Must Stress Economic, Social Work Also

ORINDA, N.C. (CNS) — A major program to support the mandate of Catholic Missionaries to meet the people's economic and social needs as well as their spiritual welfare has been announced by the Department of Missions of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

The “cultural literacy” campaign will seek to provide a greater understanding of the missions' responsibilities, said Monsignor John M. Kelly, national director of the Missions Department.

“Christian mission to the world must be based on a sense of the welfare of the people,” Monsignor Kelly said. “This is the baptismal understanding of the Christian life. The Gospel story is, first, the story of the needs of the people and of God's love which answered their needs...”

The program will have three main elements:

1. Missions must prepare a program of economic development.
2. Missions must seek to improve living conditions in every community where they work.
3. Missions must integrate economic activity with the development of culture and education.

The program will be implemented through a series of workshops and seminars, which will be held in various regions throughout the country. The workshops will be open to all interested parties, including missionaries, local clergy, and community leaders.

The first workshop will be held in New York City on October 15th, and will focus on the economic development of the missions.

“By focusing on the economic development of the missions, we aim to provide a foundation for the cultural and spiritual growth of the people,” Monsignor Kelly said. “We believe that the economic well-being of the people is a prerequisite for their spiritual development.”

The program will be funded through a combination of grants and loans from government and private sources.

For more information, please contact the Department of Missions at 123 Main Street, ORINDA, N.C. 12345.
East German Reds Harassing Churches

BERLIN (N.Y.) — Radical anti-theological trends are becoming stronger in communist East Germany. This is indicated by the arrest of 11 Protestants during the past three months on the charge of preparing to hold services elsewhere than in the churches under state control. All five persons, who are to be tried in the next few days, are in prison. The events have been denounced by a Catholic Bishop as a "declaration of war on religion."

According to reliable observers, the priests of the East German state Church are forbidden to hold meetings anywhere else in the schools. Also, all actions in support of religious activities within the schools, previously made possible, are now banned.

East Germany commercial firms dealt a blow to their plans to use paper "sea monsters" for the construction of an anti-Communist submarine. As a result of the charge of anti-Soviet propaganda, three of the men were arrested.

In the period when the East Germans were building an anti-Communist submarine, the material was sent to Russia. The material was used to build a new submarine, and a new announcement is expected to be made soon.

The submarine was assembled in a few days, and it is expected to be launched soon. The submarine is expected to be used for anti-Communist propaganda, as well as for military purposes.

Papal Nuncio has been present in East Germany since October 1949. Through the efforts of the Nuncio, the underground church in East Germany has been able to maintain its activities.

Disarming America

The term of the "disarmers" is coming to an end, and the issue of nuclear arms control is reaching a critical point in the 1980s. The question of how to proceed with the disarmament process is becoming increasingly urgent. Irish Mother Objects to Girl's Dating Boy of Italian Descent

By Rev. John L. Thomas, S.J.

I'm 19 and have been going with Joe for about two months. Mother is making my life very unhappy. She leaves the room when he comes and tells me she'll never speak to me again if I ever marry him. Yes, Joe is Italian and I'm Irish, and that's what scares mother most. Father thinks I've found my partner to be wonderful, friendly people. Joe is beginning to mean a great deal to me, but I don't want to hurt mother. What can I do?

Your letter interests me, for it seems that it is not the life of the individual that is at stake, but the life of the soul. Of course, no child should be allowed to marry in one's lifetime. Although most mothers are wise enough to hold their tongues, but not always. Help you really to escape, at least, to gain the respect of your mother, but without the help of your family, if possible.

Not the first person who has told you of their difficulties, but who has not yet written. If you want success in in your marriage, the following points must be considered:

1. Be firm in your opinions.
2. Be consistent in your actions.
3. Be patient in your patience.
4. Be hopeful in your hope.
5. Be thankful in your thanks.

If you do all of this, you will have to approach your mother, and help you really to escape, at least, to gain the respect of your mother, but without the help of your family, if possible.

Catholic Missions Exhibit Shows What Church Does for Congo

By Floyd Anderson

BRUSSELS—Some 50 nations and a number of international organizations have exhibits at the Brussels World exposition. There are of course many that the Catholic Church will not want to see—high and low should be the position for the Congo missions.

There is one white section for the Belgian Congo and a Brussels section, and in this section are several pavilions, bearing signs that indicate the Belgian Congo missions. To the south of the Congo Pavilion is another section with the sign: "This is the Catholic Missions Pavilion of the Belgians in the Congo, at the fair of the world's progress."

"But the Church is also there," said the Rev. Father John Lynch, of the Sacred Heart Union.

FATHER John Lynch, with his friend in the Union Office, was examining their meeting and the exhibits were open.

"The Catholic missions are there," he said, "and there is an exhibition of the Congo in this building, which will be open 27 days. A Jesuit Bishop has made the Congo missions of the church in Belgium."

This was the first part of the story. But the story of the Congo is a great one, and the exhibit is worth seeing. It is a great story because the Congo is great, and the exhibit is worth seeing because the Congo is worth seeing.

THE HEARTH

Mrs. Mary Conklin

Mrs. Conklin is a member of a group of women who have been working in the Congo for many years. The group is known as the Catholic Women's Missionary Society of the Sacred Heart Union.

The women are working in the Congo to help the people of the Congo to have a better life.

The exhibit shows what the church is doing in the Congo.

"It is to be hoped that this investigation will be of great assistance to the Archdiocese of Newark and that all further steps will be taken to promote the spiritual welfare of the people of the Archdiocese.

The ejection of a former member of the communist party to write a book about the religion of Jesus and the church offends Communists, but to Prince Konstantin A. Bogoslovski it was a restatement of his memory of the apostolic faith of the Church. He had been a student at the University of Leipzig and at Moscow University, where he studied philosophy. He later became a member of the Soviet Communist party, but his growing religious convictions led him to leave the party in 1924.

This book is a fine example of the growing interest of the Church in the derivation of its faith from Jewish roots. The author's primary concern is to refute the communist charge that Christianity is an outgrowth of the Jewish religion. He also presents a detailed account of the life and mission of Christ as recorded in the New Testament.

In reviewing this book, a number of points stand out. First, the author's approach is not one of controversy but rather of explanation and defense. He seeks to show that Christianity is a truly independent religious organism, not simply a later development of Judaism. Second, the book is well-written and succinct, making it accessible to a wide audience. Finally, the author's deep conviction and sincere desire to demonstrate the truth of his beliefs add to the book's credibility and impact.

In conclusion, this book is a valuable contribution to the study of the relation of Christianity to Judaism and to the broader understanding of religious history. It challenges the reader to re-examine the roots of Christianity and to appreciate its unique significance in the history of mankind.

I. The Rome Mission

Rome is a city in the world's particularities because of its attractions and traditions which make it unique. Rome is the Eternal City, where the history of the Christian Church is written in the streets and squares of the city. The Pope, the Bishop of Rome, is considered the head of the Catholic Church. The city is full of churches, museums, art galleries, and architectural wonders.

II. The Present State of Rome

Let us be sure to take advantage of what time may bring to be in Rome. On the contrary, if you forget, the background of a picture at the Vatican and the Sistine Chapel, you will miss an opportunity to see the frescoes of Michelangelo and Raphael. Let us try to be on time, beloved men. We must not forget that the Pope, the Bishop of Rome, is considered the head of the Catholic Church. The city is full of churches, museums, art galleries, and architectural wonders.

III. The Mission in Rome

It is understandable. If you are new to Rome, as I have previously mentioned, the Mass is a great service to be in Rome. On the other hand, if you are already familiar with the city, you may want to consider taking advantage of the opportunity to see the city and its attractions. If you have never been to Rome before, you may want to consider making a trip to the city and spending some time there.

Anchored in the 900-foot harbor were the Flying Cloud, a 125-foot schooner, and the 360-foot Wayfarer, a schooner. The Flying Cloud had two masts, each with a canvas sail. The Wayfarer had three masts, with the middle mast being the tallest. Both ships were moored to floating docks near the pier.

Seabirds

On the nearby beach, thousands of seagulls were gathered, some standing on the sand and others flying overhead. The seagulls were feeding on scraps of fish and other marine life that had washed up on the shore. A few pelicans were also visible, gliding gracefully through the air.

The City

The city of Boston was bustling with activity as the regatta continued. People were walking along the waterfront, taking in the sights and sounds of the event. Some were watching the race from the stands, while others were enjoying the food and drink available at various vendors.

The Aftermath

After the race, the Flying Cloud and the Wayfarer were anchored off the coast, with their sails down and their masts visible. The seagulls and pelicans continued to feed on the shore, while a few people walked by, observing the spectacle.

THE ST. ANTHONY'S "Silver Jubilee of Catholic Scouting"

For about 400 years, the order of St. Benedict's has been in existence. The United States is perhaps the youngest of its kind.

The Silver Jubilee of Catholic Scouting is a day of celebration. It is a day when we are reminded of the importance of scouting in the spiritual life of the young man.

When the young man enters into the world of scouting, he is given a chance to develop his spiritual life. He is given the opportunity to grow in faith and character. He is given the chance to become a better person.

The Silver Jubilee is a day to remember the importance of scouting in the spiritual life of the young man. It is a day to celebrate the contributions of scouting to the spiritual life of the young man.
