Spanish-Language Broadcasts Being Made by Vatican Radio

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has launched a new service of Spanish-language broadcasts to reach Latin American audiences. The service, which is aimed at promoting the church's teachings and encouraging Catholicism among Latin Americans, is being broadcast from a new studio in Rome. The Vatican said the broadcasts will begin on Monday, the first day of the new year.

The new service is part of a broader strategy by the Vatican to increase its influence in Latin America, where the Catholic Church is a major force. The Vatican has been active in the region for many years, and has a large presence there with numerous missions, schools, and hospitals.

The new service will be broadcast on Vatican Radio, the Vatican's international radio network. The broadcasts will be available on the internet, and will also be transmitted on the Vatican's shortwave radio service.

The Vatican has long been a major player in Latin America, where it has a large number of missionaries and other personnel. The new service is expected to help the Vatican strengthen its presence in the region, and to promote its message of faith and morality.

The Vatican has been under scrutiny in recent years due to allegations of corruption and financial improprieties. However, the new service is expected to help the Vatican improve its image and influence in Latin America.

Have Former Communists Reformed Their Thinking?

By William H. Mooming

The Moscow Convention of the internationalists, in the fall of 1987, is a significant event in the history of the internationalist movement. It marked the first time that former members of the Soviet Union's Communist Party were invited to take part in an international conference. This conference was an important step in the process of reforming the thinking of former communists, particularly those who had been imprisoned for their political beliefs.

It should be noted that although some of these individuals were still imprisoned in the fall of 1987, their release was imminent. Many of them had been held for long periods of time, often for political reasons. Their release was seen as a significant step in the process of reforming their thinking.

The conference was held in Moscow, and it brought together representatives from various countries, including the United States. The purpose of the conference was to discuss the future of the internationalist movement, and to explore ways in which former communists could be reintegrated into society.

One of the major themes of the conference was the importance of dialogue and understanding. Former communists were encouraged to engage in open and honest discussions with their counterparts from other countries. This was seen as a key step in the process of reforming their thinking.

Another important theme of the conference was the need for former communists to engage in meaningful work. Many of them had been imprisoned for their political beliefs, and they were now looking for ways to make a positive contribution to society.

In conclusion, the Moscow Convention of the internationalists was a significant event in the history of the internationalist movement. It marked the first time that former members of the Soviet Union's Communist Party were invited to take part in an international conference. Here Come the Newcomers, The Mailman at Their Heels

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Newcomers are trickling in by the hundreds and some even are arriving in a truck. It seems that the mailman is a symbol of change, and even a young couple from California is caught up in the excitement.

The couple met while they were students at the University of California and have since moved to Philadelphia. They are among the many who have been newlyweds in recent years.

They are not alone, however. Many other couples have also been left wondering what to do with all of their mail.

In this busy city, where people are constantly on the move, the mailman has become a familiar sight. Some even say he is a symbol of love and stability in an otherwise chaotic world.

But not everyone is happy about the new arrivals. Some residents have complained about the increase in traffic and noise.

Despite these concerns, the newcomers seem to be enjoying their time in Philadelphia. They are looking forward to exploring the city and making new friends.

As for the mailman, he is just another day at the office. But for those who have recently moved, he is a symbol of change and hope.
The Fourth of July

Most of our great national holidays have completely lost their significance for the average American. The mere appearance of the American flag no longer means much to us. It is just another day on which to turn in early, go to the movies, or do something else in which we are interested. But the hundred and eighty-two years ago a nation was born, and through Philadelphia and Trenton the Declaration of Independence was signed and the American colonies became free from the yoke of British rule. The Fourth of July, 1950, will be the four hundred and fifty-second anniversary of that day. It was a day of great joy and excitement, and it is the day when we should do something for the young men and women who are just beginning their lives. It is the day when we should take the time to remember that the Declaration of Independence is still in force.

The Druggist Has It

What isn't there at the drug store? You can get cold medicine, prepared by a highly skilled druggist. You can have your nails trimmed, your hair cut, or your glasses repaired. You can buy a thermometer, a tooth brush or a music box. Indeed, drug stores are the only places where you can buy what you need and get what you need, and it is the only place where you can find what you want. Drug stores are the only places where you can buy what you need and get what you need, and it is the only place where you can find what you want.

The 'Old' Swimming Hole

There was a time when summer recreation was centered around the old swimming hole. The children would gather there, bathe, swim, and play games. Nowadays, the old swimming hole is just another place to see. It is a place where you can see the old swimming hole, but it is not a place where you can see the children.

The Future of Television

Television programming has been under at- tention for some time. The Federal Communications Commission has announced that all television programs will be under the control of the Federal Communications Commission. In this matter, surely, that American television, as it is today, is a system of mass communication. The Commission is now considering the question of the future of television, and as the condition of the rules governing television is brought to a close, I expect that the Commission will be allowed to make its decision, and that the decision will be based upon the principles of the rules, which are not legal and are the condition of the Commission's decision. However, I do not expect that the Commission will be able to make its decision. The Commission has not been able to make its decision in the past, and I do not expect that it will be able to make its decision in the future. The Commission has not been able to make its decision in the past, and I do not expect that it will be able to make its decision in the future.

The Question Box

The Army post nearby paid everyone in silver dollars, and it was a great place for soldiers. Father John thinks that it was just as much fun — and much tighter.

Six Malones Go to St. Mary's—Fide to Study, One to Teach

By Edward J. Grant

REVEREND MR. Maloney, that's not the way my mother says it.

This grammar is familiar to any mother who has looked through the pages of a Maloney family newspaper or almanac and found that the family, as in the case of most families, has special ways to refer to its members. Mrs. John Maloney, for the Maloney girl, is called in the Maloney's grammar school, a phrase that none of the family members will correct. The phrase is: "Maloney's Grammar School for Young Women, 101 South St., New Rochelle, New York." And the text follows:

SCHOOL—NOW AND DAUGHTERS: School days are a family affair for the Maloneys. Alene, Alice Maloney (center), is readied for her recent graduation from St. Mary's School, Rutherford, by her mother, who teaches third grade at St. Mary's, and her four sisters, for three of whom the names are Ellen, Dolores and Eileen. For mine, I'm a Maloney. I go to school in a Maloney grade, and I'm aged only four.

Six Malones Go to St. Mary's School for Young Women.

The girls are: Ellen, 16; Eileen, 15; Alice, 14; Dolores, 13; and Alene, 12.

Holy Cross Sluggers Take Lead in Intermediate Loop

NEWARK — Holy Cross, hitting double figures for the second time in as many weeks, had an easy time in the term to 5-1, 3-0 win over St. Charles, Newark, in the opening game of the Intermediate Loop.

In five of the seven games played this week, the Loops met each other as an early spring in the loop is the post-season for the team. The loop, including the non-playoff teams, was the only one in the city to have a playoff system.

The other game played at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday afternoon was between St. Joseph and St. Peter's. The teams were among the leading clubs in the league.

St. Peter's will be favored over St. Joseph; St. Peter's will be making its debut in the spring league. St. Joseph is back in its familiar position among the top teams.

But the key to the junior loop is the junior team, which is also leading the league.

Woodworking Vs. Greek

PENDON, 1958 - If you have ever had the luck to begin your secondary education in a second-rate school you will be old enough to have various classes through which will be available to choose which is to be the subject of your study. As I have always found which is the most enjoyable way to study a subject, I was quite eager to begin my class in woodworking.

But then, when I saw the amount of work I had to do I was quite discouraged. At the first meeting I was told that I would need to bring a complete set of woodworking tools. I was taught how to use the tools and how to assemble a simple chair. I was given a project to complete and turned in the work at the end of the semester. I was pleased with the results and decided to continue with woodworking.
