Apostolic Acts Requested by Pontiff

CASTELGANDOLFO—A call for apostolic action was issued to two groups here last week by Pope Paul XII.

The Pope, addressing 2,000 delegates to the second international congress of the Order of St. Dominus, said that the Church expects them to show the same apostolic devotion in defense of the Faith that St. Dominus displayed in his time.

In a letter to Cardinal Tardini, archbishop of Milan, the Pope said that he and many other faithful seek to give an apostolic witness of Christ in defense of the Faith and justice in defense of the Beatitudes.

The Pope urged the delegates to be attentive to the needs of the poor, the hungry, the sick, the sick and the old, and to the needs of the Church.

Mother's Talk on Contemplative Life

In my view, the contemplative life is one of great purity and simplicity. It is a life of prayer, of reflection, and of devotion to the divine. It is a life that is lived in the service of the Church and in obedience to the teachings of Jesus Christ. The contemplative life is a life of sacrifice and of service. It is a life that requires great faith and great love.

The contemplative life is a life that is lived in the service of the poor. It is a life that is lived in the service of those who are in need. It is a life that is lived in the service of the kingdom of God. The contemplative life is a life that is lived in the service of the Church. The contemplative life is a life that is lived in the service of the world.

In conclusion, the contemplative life is a life of great beauty and of great value. It is a life that is lived in the service of the Church and in obedience to the teachings of Jesus Christ. It is a life of sacrifice and of service. It is a life that requires great faith and great love. May God bless you on your journey.

Shift in Emphasis Urged on Colleges

WASHINGTON (NC) — Catholic scholars must remove the fact that "fewer Catholics are entering the scientific and professional fields than our number in the general population would lead us to expect," a Catholic psychologist said here.

Dr. Martin A. Padgett, president of the American Catholic Psychologists Association, in an address to the group this week, noted that many lay scientists are 'very good' at what they do, but that many Catholic clergy "are not nearly so good as they might be." The implication is that an emphasis on higher education is needed for the clergy.

Padgett urged that college administrators and clergy attend to the "preparation" of clergy, which he said is neglected.

Dr. Padgett expressed concern about the number of Catholic colleges that are "not attracting enough Catholics to their student bodies." He added that "the percentage of young Catholics entering the seminary is too small."

RELIGIOUS ARTISTS

State Principles

CINCINNATI (NC) — A combination of those who appropriately revered religion, as led by the Catholic Church, the Jewish community, and the National Council of Churches, to remove the "October Crusades" from the curriculum, and to encourage "the study of Jewish history, culture, and literature and to recognize the contributions of Jews to world civilization and to modern society."

The association, which has been meeting in Cincinnati for the past few days, is "the work of a number of religious leaders, who believe that a religious education should be a part of the curriculum in all public schools," said the Rev. Dr. Arthur DeWitt, director of the Christian Service Commission of the National Council of Churches.

The association is to meet in Cincinnati for the last time at the end of the year, and will be dissolved when the association's work has been completed.

Movie Ads Are Disinguishing, Often Mislead the Public

By William H. Mordaing

Advertising "the make" of a movie has become a major form of a secondary sale. While the ads try to attract the consumer, the public is misled by the "make" since it has no association with the product, the movie. The misrepresentation of the movie's nature is not limited to the "make," but the ad may also misrepresent the movie's content or message. TREAT GROWING BOY DIFFERENT THAN YOU WOULD A CHILD.

By Rev. John L. Thomas, S.J.
Assistant Professor of Sociology, St. Louis University

My 13-year-old son has changed completely during the past six months. He has grown dyspeptic, is always grumbling, and wants to play the violin so we can't stay in the house. He goes to confession but is the same next day. When he gets his allowance, he asks for more. If I reprimanded him, he says, "Stop preaching at me. Now he's started to do poorly in school. How can I help him?"

I feel like my son is just starting to find himself. There's too much work at school and most of his friends are into drugs. The signs of an adolescent trying to find his own way are everywhere. The family has lost his trust, his loyalty, his respect. He has no one to talk to.

Your turn, then: What will you do? You'll start talking to him. But I don't think it's the easiest way. There are no easy ways. You are a child rather than an adult. You are grey and draw the line between yourself and him. He is going on his way toward maturity, and it is impossible. The adolescent is a child, that's true. But you must not help him as a child, but you must help him as a man. You are superior and from him. It is your age and experience which influence you. You are one who is not alone, but who is always involved in the struggle for success and happiness.
Bayonne Priest to Cover 18,000 of Truck

By Anne Meck Penner

BAYONNE—Rev. Patrick F. Cashman, who has been busy up to his ears in building a truck, may be able to get a break, however, in the near future. Cashman, who heads the new parish here, is to take the position of Rev. Francis P. Mullen, who is to leave the Jersey City parish this month to become pastor of the new Church of St. James, in the western part of the city.

Cashman feels that the new parish here is to be a challenge and will be a help to the community, but that it will be a challenge to the new pastor as well.

Cashman has been in the construction business for many years and has been very active in the building of churches and other public buildings. He has built many of the churches in the city, including the Church of the Holy Name, which is the largest church in the city.

Cashman is a member of the Knights of Columbus and has been very active in the organization. He has been president of the local chapter for many years and has been very active in the work of the organization.
