Course Description and Content
This course offers a broad overview of the study of international conflict and security. The purpose of this course is to introduce students to different ways in which states have historically attempted to secure their territories/polities and to compare them with ways in which states currently define the nature of (inter)national threats and the notion of security itself. The end of the Cold War and the increasing global economic, political and cultural interdependence have allegedly put to rest old fears of great wars and nuclear annihilation. Simultaneously, they have raised new specters of terrorism and of biological, cultural and information violence. The change may be attributed to re-conceptualization of sovereignty and borders: once considered sacred and inviolable, borders are now increasingly viewed as porous, malleable and indefensible. And this transformation, of course, poses some very important questions: can states really protect what they used to proclaim that they could protect? Can states really ignore violence that takes place within the borders of other states? And where do states and boundaries of their intervention really begin and end?

Students should be prepared to read a significant amount of material in this course. Courses work well when students come prepared for a critical exploration of the assigned material. The main text, Joseph Nye’s Understanding International Conflicts, ends each chapter with pertinent study questions. Each student should read the questions before reading the chapter and then go back to them again after you finished reading the chapter. If you do that, and if you think thoroughly about each question, I am sure we will have a very interesting and productive semester.

Throughout the semester we will link the readings to contemporary events. Students therefore should stay abreast of current events through the reading of newspapers, blogs, listserves, etc. Good starting points are internationally recognized news-sites like: The New York Times, Washington Post, The Wall Street Journal, The BBC, AllAfrica.com. You may also want to watch cable news on TV, such as: the BBC, CNN International, CCTV9 (from China) and Russia Today provide good insight into current events. You will get a broader perspective and insight if you follow news from different countries.
Each student will choose one country at the beginning of the semester to follow over the course of the semester. It is each student’s responsibility to examine and thoroughly understand the political and economic history of their respective country, as well as the contemporary standing of each country. Obvious questions are: is the country democratic? What are the security challenges facing country X? Is there an ongoing conflict in country X? How do the theories addressed in the course help you to understand country X? The mid-term exam, final exam, and semester paper will address specific questions related to your country of focus. Therefore, it is imperative that each student becomes comfortable with his or her respective country’s development over time.

Assignments and Grading Rules
1. Leading class discussion. Each student will start off a class discussion by presenting a 5-10 minute summary and analysis of the day’s readings. Leading class discussions will be assigned during the first class. Each student should present the main thesis, outline the author’s argument, identify the evidence, and provide the conclusion. Is the argument logically coherent? Does the author provide empirical evidence in support of the main thesis? Offer your own well-reasoned ideas on the topic.

2. Midterm exam. Students will take an in-class midterm exam on the scheduled date of 4 March 2015. There will be no make-up exam given except for a university-excused absence.

3. Semester research paper. Each student will write a 10 - 13 page semester research paper on a topic of her/his choice with instructor approval, and will be due in class on/or before 22 April 2015, and late papers will lose 5 points per day from their grade. The paper will be based on each student’s chosen country, and should address some element(s) of international conflict and security. More instruction will be provided throughout the course.

4. Final exam. Students will take an in-class final exam on the scheduled date. There will be no make-up exam given except for a university-excused absence.

5. Class participation and attendance. All students are expected to do the reading in advance and to take part in the discussion. Taking part in class discussion is more than speaking one time over the duration of the semester. The quality of class sessions is greatly enhanced when students are prepared to engage the course material in a constructive fashion. Participation will be noted and credited to your grade.

Poor attendance (over two absences) will result in a reduction of your grade. Each absence, beyond the two excused ones, will reduce your final grade by 2%.

In order to successfully complete the midterm and the final, students should chose to carefully follow security policy/issues in one of the following countries: Venezuela, Pakistan, India, Turkey, Russia, Ivory Coast, Colombia, Chad, Ukraine, Kosovo, Burundi, France, Kenya, Sudan, Egypt, China, Georgia, Iraq, Afghanistan, Burma, Iraq,
The Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), Israel, Libya, Denmark, Iran, Bolivia, Rwanda, Cuba, Taiwan, North Korea, South Africa, South Korea, Somalia or Zimbabwe. (If you do not find any of the above countries interesting, you can choose a different country provided that you can find enough information about it).

Academic and Professional Integrity

All forms of dishonesty, whether by act or omission, including, but not limited to, cheating, plagiarism and knowingly furnishing false information, are prohibited. Work submitted in the course must be the product of each individual student. Contributions of others to the finished work must be appropriately cited and acknowledged. Any work not following these guidelines may be found to be plagiarism and may result in academic suspension, or being asked to leave the university. Plagiarism is a serious offense, and it is each student’s responsibility to abide by university guidelines. If students have any concerns or questions please see the instructor.
Disability Services
If you have a documented disability you may be eligible for accommodations, in academic classes, the residence halls, food services areas, etc., under the Americans with Disabilities Act and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. Students are not permitted to negotiate accommodations directly with professors. To receive accommodations or assistance, please self-identify at the Office of Disability Support Services (DSS), Duffy Hall, Room 67. The staff at DSS will help you to develop a plan for accommodations. For more information contact DSS at (973) 313-6003.
