Urges 'Moral Renaissance' in Labor-Management Relations

NEWARK—A 'moral renaissance' in labor-management relations was called for by Monsignor F. Finnegan, the nation's top labor lawyer, at the opening of a three-day convention of the Archdiocese of Newark.

In his address to the 270 members of the executive committee of the Archdiocese, Monsignor Finnegan said that 'moral values are an integral part of good labor relations,' and that remedial legislation alone will not produce remedies. 'We can't legislate morality,' he said.

He said that labor-management relations must be based on a sound moral philosophy, and that any gains made in labor laws would be meaningless if they were not based on moral principles.

Charges of corruption in labor-management relations and the need for the church to give proper guidance were also discussed.

Catholic Lay Leaders in Cuba Support Fidel Castro Regime

HAVANA (CUBA) — Cuba's Catholic lay leaders have issued a statement warning their supporters about the regime of Fidel Castro's government, the same day they urged the government to release more than 1,000 political prisoners it has detained.

The statement, signed by leaders of four Catholic action groups, was broadcast on Cuban radio.

The statement said that the Catholic Church should not be associated with Fidel Castro's regime and that its members should not support it.

However, the statement also praised the Cuban government's efforts to combat poverty and improve education, and said it should be a model for other countries.

The statement concluded by urging the Catholic Church to remain neutral in the political battle between Fidel Castro's socialist regime and the United States, which is opposed to Castro's policies.

Catholics in Cuba have been critical of the government's treatment of religious leaders and the Catholic Church's efforts to maintain its influence in the country.

The statement was issued by the Cuban Catholic Action Movement, the Cuban Catholic Action Movement of the Small Catholics, the Cuban Catholic Action Movement of the Young Catholics, and the Cuban Catholic Action Movement of the Catholic Students.

The groups said they would continue to work for the rights of religious leaders and the Catholic Church in Cuba.

Meanwhile, the Catholic Church in Cuba has been criticized for its support of the government's policies, which have included the nationalization of property and the suppression of political dissent.

The statement was broadcast on national radio and television, and was also distributed to the Catholic Church's community centers.

Senator Kennedy's Church-State Views

Editor:
In the article, "Sen. Kennedy’s Church-State Views Threaten Catholic Vote," which appears in this issue, a sentence quoted from the Senator states that "at the back of my mind is the feeling that if the Catholic Church were not in existence, this country would be doing a lot better in the moral sense." This statement is not an accurate portrayal of the Senator's views on the role of religion in public life.

The Senator has consistently advocated for the separation of church and state, respecting the role of the Catholic Church as a separate institution from the government. He has also emphasized the importance of individual freedom of choice in religious matters, and has supported the protection of religious groups from government interference.

In the case of the article you mentioned, the Senator's statement was taken out of context, and the full meaning of his words was not conveyed. A more accurate representation of his views would be that he believes in the separation of church and state, and the protection of religious groups from government interference, while also recognizing the importance of individual freedom of choice in religious matters.

Parents Are Unfair to Teens
—If Their Discipline Is Soft

By Rev. John L. Thomas, S.J.

Discipline is an art requiring time, patience, and tough-mindedness. It would be nice if they could do it all with a smile, but the reality is that it often involves的样子和不快。 When a parent is soft, it can be difficult for the child to understand the reasons behind the discipline, which may lead to feelings of confusion and resentment. However, if the discipline is too harsh, it can also do harm, leading to feelings of fear and oppression. It is important for parents to strike a balance between these two extremes to ensure that their children develop healthy and respectful attitudes towards authority and boundaries.

Dr. Sih's New Book Discusses Role of Communism in China

By William P. Jenkins

NEWARK—Has communism as a social philosophy been invariably accepted by the people of China? Had they rejected Christianity forever?

Dr. Peter T. Sih, Director of the Institute of Far Eastern Studies, replies with a strong "No!" for these queries.

His views are expressed in "Red China's View of Christianity," which will be published Apr. 4 by Henry Regency Co., Chicago.

In his thesis, Mr. John J. Molina, S.J., presents a critical analysis of the whole postwar period, and of the humanitarians who explored the area.

"In this work," the author declares, "I analyse the part, political and social, the Communists have played in the world."

Dr. Sih is the first American Christian to explore the area, and the first in the English-speaking world to write on his subject. His book emphasizes the need for a fresh look at the problem.

Ward, of St. Mary of St. Carmel Church, Dunmore, Pa., donned an oxygen mask and made his way through dense clouds of smoke to reverse the blaze at St. Joseph's Garrison at the height of a church fire. A few minutes later the fire in front of the main altar collapsed, and the church suffered $76,000,000 damage. Father Ward is shown as he was assisting leaving the burning church.

The Fire That Almost Stopped The Advocate Presses

By June Dryer

It started to be a normal day. Tuesday afternoon, The Advocate staff rushing to get our next edition in the mail. The story we had planned was finished except for the last article. Addie and I were at the typewriter typing it in to make sure our last minute was not forgotten. Then while offices were in捏ne the computer crashed. The story was lost.

"The typewriter crashed," Addie remarked. "The circulation director, Mr. Emerick, had the same early Advocate accident to his desk working. Again he asked, "You need something" - because he had been to the typewriter to type a story. Good news, he said. We were very happy. We were working on a office and Addie had just finished printing a story. We were very happy.

"It turned out that the old typewriter had been in use for over 30 years. We were using it every day except for Saturday, when Addie had just typed the last story. We were very happy.

The Advocates were happy to use the new typewriter. It was much faster and better than the old one. It had a built-in computer and was much easier to use. We were very happy.

Preach With Wisdom, Simplicity, Charity

I. Wisdom
Wisdom is inspired by the Holy Spirit to show the usual causes of human error and the characteristic features of the wise and the foolish. You are invited to consider the words of the father addressed to his son.

In our First Experiences

We believe that our greatest help during our spiritual exercises will come from the Holy Spirit, who will lead us to the knowledge of the truth. The Holy Spirit is present in us all the time, and we can be taught by Him if we are open to His guidance. The Holy Spirit will direct us in our spiritual journey.

On the other hand, we may not always be aware of the Holy Spirit's presence. We may not be able to understand all the things that we are taught. We may not always be able to see the full picture.

We must rely on the Holy Spirit to guide us in our spiritual journey. We must trust in the Holy Spirit to give us the wisdom to discern the truth from the lies.

In conclusion, we must rely on the Holy Spirit to guide us in our spiritual journey. We must trust in the Holy Spirit to give us the wisdom to discern the truth from the lies. We must be open to the guidance of the Holy Spirit and follow His lead.

A "Grandfather Todd of Old Cape Cod" Easter Story for Children

It was Easter morning, a long time ago, up on Old Cape Cod. Before daylight a stiff white snow had fallen, as is routine Cape snow everywhere. The sand dunes were white. The church steeple was white. And the long axis of the giant windmill was glazed in white frost.

Then the sun came out and everything was made of magic, glistening with golden rays. The robins ran out of their bowers and flitted from branch to branch, as if humming magic minni-light. The birds began to sing in the shrubbery. Two gray squirrels started chattering in a local tree.

It was a heavenly day.

Grandfather Todd woke up the two children on this Cape Cod cottage, and said, "Come, sleepy heads! It's time for Mass up, my little darlings. This is Easter Day."

After breakfast the children wanted to get out into the snow to see if they could find a rabbit or two, and left for Mass. But Grandfather Todd said, "No, children. Not church."

They all went in Mass to Grandfather Todd's red-roofed cottage. This was fun, because the car had no top, and the children had to walk in and watch the sea gulls flying across Cape Cod Bay. So much better than being shut up in a closet where you don't know what might happen.

With the masses still ringed in their ears, "after the beautiful Easter Mass was over they drove back to the cottage.

"Now," cried the children, who were twice and only five years old, "Now, grandfather, may we look for the Easter Bunny?"

"Please, may we?" asked Meg.

"Please! Please! Please!" cried Marie, who was impatient.

"Please! " asked Grandfather Todd, who was a very magic old gentleman, and with a smile up his nose said, "Look out below, Meg, and in the cottage.

The children rushed over very excited. At first they cried nothing. Then, all at once they spied a Bunny who pointed his nose right at them and blinked twice.

"Bunny! Bunny! The Easter Bunny!

"Do tell us," said Meg and Marie together, "where are the Easter gifts you have hidden for us?"

"Why right there!" said the Bunny, pointing in two directions at once. He was bracing, very bracing.

"You must see!" said Meg and Marie, "Grandfather Todd says you have a surprise for us. Now, where is it?"

"A right behind you," said the Bunny, and painted the faces and did it.

"It was an Easter egg," the children cried indeed it was. And as it was the Todd's chick-made egg, incident, it was beautiful, and very beautiful. The children turned and there, right before their eyes, was a big, magic Easter egg they had ever seen.

"It was a surprise egg," the children cried. Indeed it was. And as it was a Todd's chick-made egg, incident, it was beautiful, and very beautiful.

"A red button!" said Marie. "A red button!"

"You must see!" said the Bunny. "This is fun. Where is the Magic Egg you take next?"

So Meg pressed the red button, and they found themselves looking into Bunny Land. The Egg was filled with flowers and trees and little bunnies and white bunny bunnies. There was a Bunny Church and a Bunny School. Baby Bunnies were playing with hoops. Some were rolling skaters. One was sitting on a fence eating a cookie. Another was flying a kite. And A Papa Bunny in a bright, purple jacket was riding along on a daisy in a three-car train.

And, as the children watched, the Church door opened and a Bunny Bride and Green walked arm in arm down the aisle, as the organ played, "The Wedding March." Then the other children came in, and everybody was laughing and happy.

Grandfather Todd, Marie, quite delight ed with the Bunny wedding. And then she said, "Grandfather!"

Meg said, "I'll press the button once more. They may say.

"I know you," said Marie.

The two children put their face up to the magic glass in the Magic Egg, and looked inside, they could not see a thing.

Everything looked very green.

Then they knew where they were. They were at the bottom of the glass in the sea. They sat on the rough glass in the Magic Egg, and little Sea Bunnies swam up, and giggled and tickled and laughed again.

Then a Star Fish came up to the window, waving a red and sparkled as a Star Fish always does. Then the Bunny, Todd opened his mouth. And a small skylight did not open.

When the Skylights were wide open they tapped a small key no bigger than a thumb. It was dressed in green, with a yellow cap, and red stoppers.

"What are they doing in the Skylight?" asked Marie, who had never seen little boys, working in Skylights before.

"I don't know," said Marie, "But I think they tapped on the Magic Easter Egg window and cried, "What are you doing, little Oyster Boys?""

One of the little boys came up, put his face in the glass and said very loud, "Silly question! We're making Pearls, of course! How did you think Pearls got into Skylights anyway?"

"We don't know," said Meg and Marie together. "But thank you very much, little Oyster Boys!"

The little Oyster Boys went back in work making Pearls and after a while the children, tired of watching them, pressed the red button again to make more magic.

But this time they could not see anything they could not find the sweetest music coming out of the Magic Egg. It was such heavenly music.

Then they saw a blue sky and hundreds of Angels blowing on trumpets. Near them saw a beautiful, a beautiful garden. The children could not see the bottom of the sea. No one could catch them now.

"Good, cried Meg. There escaped the Christmas ball and Marie. This is fun. Where is the Magic Egg you take next?"

So Meg pressed the red button, and they found themselves looking into Bunny Land. The Egg was filled with flowers and trees and little bunnies and white bunny bunnies. There was a Bunny Church and a Bunny School. Baby Bunnies were playing with hoops. Some were rolling skaters. One was sitting on a fence eating a cookie. Another was flying a kite.
