WASHINGON (ENS) - The U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to hear a case that tests whether the "free exercise" clause in the Constitution allows people to practice non-Christian religions.

The court will decide whether a Pennsylvania case about the free exercise of religion is the "first test case" in which the Supreme Court will lay down the rules for the "free exercise" clause.

The case involves a group of Jewish families who argue that the "free exercise" clause requires the government to allow them to worship in their own way.

The court will hear arguments in the case March 19.

WASHINGTON (May 24) -- The Department of the Interior has announced that it will issue a permit to the Catholic Church to build a new church in the area of what used to be the site of the old St. John the Baptist Church in Washington, D.C.

The permit was granted after the church, which has been in operation for more than 100 years, was closed due to financial problems. The new church will be built on the site of the old church and will be known as the St. John the Baptist Church.

The permit was issued by the Department of the Interior after a public hearing and review of the proposed project. The church has been operating in the area for more than 100 years and has been a landmark in the community.

Describes Hardships Faced By the 'Saints of Tomorrow'

Ironically, one of the organizers of the event was Father Patrick Shanahan, a Jesuit priest who had spent many years working among the poor in South America. He had been deeply affected by the suffering he had witnessed and was determined to bring attention to the plight of the poor around the world.

Father Shanahan described his visit to a slum area in South America where he had seen ganze displaced people living in makeshift shelters. He spoke of the hunger, disease, and despair that he had witnessed. He said, "They have been only today, but they will be tomorrow. They have been only yesterday, but they will be today. They have been only yesterday, but they will be tomorrow."

The other speaker, Father John O'Connor, a Jesuit priest who had served in Africa, spoke of the challenges faced by the Church in that continent. He said, "The Church in Africa is growing rapidly, but it is also facing many difficulties. The government is often hostile, and the missionaries are often targetted by those who oppose the spread of Christianity."

The event was well attended, with many people coming to hear the speakers. There was a sense of urgency and determination in the air as people spoke of the need to do more to help the poor around the world. The event ended with a call to action, urging everyone to do their part in the fight against poverty.

In his closing words, the moderator said, "We must not forget that the poor are not only victims, but also creators of hope. They have the power to transform our world, if we only give them a chance."

The event was a powerful reminder of the challenges faced by the Church and the world today, but also a source of hope and inspiration for those who are committed to making a difference.
Urges Campaign to Overcome Ignorance in Latin America

SANTOS, Chile (NC) — A Catholic official has called for a determined effort to reach the untold millions of Latin Americans, especially youth, in their ignorance of Latin American history.

The move was aimed at the Latin American bishops, who have called for a spiritual awakening among the people, and the Catholic Church's efforts to reach the people in their own language and culture.

A Gallup poll released recently showed that 80% of Latin Americans are either illiterate or have only a basic education. The official said that the Church must take action to overcome this ignorance.

The official said that the Church must develop programs that are relevant to the people's lives, such as education, health, and social services. He also called for a greater involvement of the clergy in the daily life of the people.

The official added that the Church must also work to correct the stereotypes and misconceptions that many young people have about the Church and its teachings.

He said that the Church must also work to promote a culture of peace and non-violence, and to bring about social justice.

The official concluded by saying that the Church must work together with other institutions, such as the government and civil society, to achieve these goals.
Love in Las Vegas

More than a New Catholic has been the endearment of those on the desk of the director of the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Bureau at the center of the city. They are not only the ones who have come to Las Vegas in the past few years, but also the ones who have gone there in the past few years.

We have received letters from the people in Las Vegas, some of whom have written to us in the last few years, expressing their love for the city. They have even written to us about their experiences in Las Vegas.

In this regard, the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Bureau has been an important factor in the city's development. It has helped to promote the city as a tourist destination, and has helped to create a positive image of Las Vegas as a place to visit. It is clear that the city of Las Vegas is still growing and developing, and that the future is bright for Las Vegas as a tourist destination.

Jersey Priest Was Gold Rush Missionary

By Floyd Anderson

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The gold rush of the 1800s had a profound effect on the lives of many Californians, including one man who became a priest and dedicated his life to serving the poor and needy.

Father Edward J. McIntrye, a native of Ireland, came to California in 1849 in search of gold. After working for several months in the mines, he decided to return to Ireland, but changed his mind and stayed in California instead.

In 1850, Father McIntrye was ordained as a priest and began serving the poor and needy in San Francisco, where he opened a school for children of the poor.

He continued to serve the community for many years, and was known for his compassion and dedication to helping those in need.

Father McIntrye passed away in 1864, but his legacy lives on today through the work of the many missionaries who continue to serve the poor and needy in California.

Charity Gives From Love, Not Out of Necessity

Amidst death and sorrow, they now give out of necessity in the same

First Lady Teachers' Meeting Draws Over 1,200

The Archdiocese expressed joy that the teachers had chosen St. Thomas More to be their patron. In many ways, the teachers' presence was vital to the event of the week. The teachers of St. Thomas More, along with those from other schools, embraced the spirit of the celebration.

"The function of the Christian teacher is to be a beacon of light in an atmosphere of darkness," said Msgr. John V. O'Connell, Chancellor of the Archdiocese. "The teachers' presence was vital to the success of the event. The teachers were united in their commitment to education and the spiritual well-being of their students."

1960 Not a 'Year of Decision' On North Jersey Football Fields

NEWARK—With one league race already ended in the fall, and prospects for the division of state championships dim, the prospects for a "Year of Decision" on North Jersey grids can be considered slight.

It is possible that this week-end will see the first of a few decisions. Newark St. Michael's at Paterson, and St. Joseph's at Newark, both non-conference games, may well see the emergence of one of the state's top teams. If not, the momentum will carry over into the next week, and the season will be well on its way to another climax.

For now, however, the most interesting games are local ones. With the exception of Morristown-Beard at Morristown High on Nov. 17, all the major league games are cupped in the high school league, where the spotlight will also be on the non-conference games.

At Youth Convention Cities Christianity as a Revolution

JERSEY CITY — Mons. John J. Daughtrey, president of Sacred Heart University, echoed the enthusiasm and excitement of the American Church at the 1968 National Catholic Youth Convention, Nov. 6 at the Civic Center.

"The spirit of the times..." said Mons. Daughtrey, "is no longer contained in the borders of the United States. It is a world movement... an American movement... a Catholic movement.

"The idea of 'revolution' is not new; it is as old as the Church itself. It was a revolution when the early Christians broke away from the Jewish Law and taught man to love God through Jesus... It was a revolution when the Church left the world of the Caesars and taught man to love his neighbor... It was a revolution when the Church left the world of paganism and taught man to love God..."

"Now, in our time, the Church is again engaged in a revolution... a revolution of the spirit."

"People are no longer satisfied with the kind of Christianity that is contained in the Catechism... They want it made relevant... They want to see it lived..."

"To all the delegates that you wish to relate to modern problems, we in the Archdiocese of Newark invite you to participate in our efforts towards the resolution of Christianity... as we seek to effectuate social life of the world, she said... "in the renewal of the institutions of Christ and His Church..."

"In this battle, we must be the Church, not just a band of Christians... We must be the Church..."

"The reform... the revolution... is not a revolutionary doctrine... It is a discipline of the heart..."
