Havana (Reuters) - Pre-Cuba groups tried to convince remarkably the Pope and the Archbishop of Mexico City that they could stop a Catholic priest from being read at Sunday Mass in the Cathedral of Santiago de Cuba. However, the priest, Msgr. Oscar Noriega, was allowed to proceed with his sermon despite pressure from some quarters.

The sermon was broadcast live on national radio and was heard by thousands throughout Cuba. The sermon addressed the need for reconciliation and urged the Cuban government to release political prisoners.

The Cuban government has long been criticized for its treatment of religious leaders and activists, with many fearing for their safety and freedom of speech.

In his sermon, Msgr. Noriega stressed the importance of dialogue and urged the government to engage in a peaceful and constructive way to resolve differences.

The sermon was well-received by many, who praised the priest for his courage and dedication to the cause of peace.

However, some segments of the Cuban population expressed concern, with some criticizing the message as too soft on the regime.

The sermon concluded with a call for continued prayer and support for those affected by the government's policies.

The Saints Offer Proof Holiness Is Attainable

By Frank J. Sheehan

Every man of the same mind of holiness offered in the Church! Would we not think of the Church that these words apply to? Would we not think of the Church that we belong to? Or are we not the Church that these words apply to?

It is important that we understand and appreciate the holiness in which we live. Holiness is not something that can be achieved easily, but it is something that can be cultivated and developed in our lives. Holiness is not something that can be achieved easily, but it is something that can be cultivated and developed in our lives.

Men at Work

The Saints of Newark and Paterson have been faithful to their work. Their bountiful harvests and victories have been the result of a lasting faith and a strong determination to succeed. These holy men and women have been the “pillars of the Church” in their respective communities.

In the city of Newark, the Archdiocese of Newark has been working tirelessly to build up the Church and its institutions. The work of the Archdiocese of Newark has been guided by the late Archbishop of Newark, who said: “The Church is a living organism, and as such it must be strengthened by the faithful.”

More on Limiting Family Size With View to Education Costs

By Rev. John L. Thomas, S.J.

Assistant Professor of Economics, University of Scranton.

In your article on family incomes and education I was surprised that you take it for granted that to take a job by a job, women could receive a Catholic education in a state school. I am wondering about regulating family size? Is this a new doctrine? We have never considered the subject before. Last year, when I asked the priest about regulations, he said "God takes care of the poor." He then went on to explain why he could not help the poor person.

You write: "If you read our article, you will find that the solution of the problem of overpopulation which might be taken is to limit the family size. If you are in Mrs. Smith's class, you will find that the solution of the problem of overpopulation which might be taken is to limit the family size. Catholic America has many stories — a fact that many of us never knew. The story of the first Thanksgiving is one such story.

Without question, the first Thanksgiving was a great success. It was a celebration of freedom and a thanksgiving for the harvest. It was also a time of peace and friendship. Fostering the Reading Habit

By Ed Grant

A MOTHER of four children who have been encouraged to read and do so enthusiastically. She said to me recently, "Reading to children is so important because it helps them develop a love for language and literature. It is like giving them a key to understanding the world around them."

She further added, "I believe that reading should be a joyful experience, not a chore. That is why I try to make it fun for my children by selecting books that are both educational and entertaining."

She also shared her tips on how to foster reading habits in children:

1. Read to them often:
   - Reading to children helps them develop an appreciation for language and literature.
   - It also helps them to learn new words and phrases.
   - It can also help them to develop their imagination.

2. Choose books that they will enjoy:
   - Children are more likely to enjoy reading if they find the books interesting.
   - Children's books are available in a variety of topics and genres.
   - Parents should choose books that are age-appropriate and that their children will enjoy.

3. Make reading a part of their daily routine:
   - Setting aside a regular time for reading can help children develop the habit of reading.
   - Parents can also model the behavior of reading by setting an example for their children.

4. Encourage them to read on their own:
   - Giving children the freedom to choose their own books can help them develop a love for reading.
   - Parents can also encourage children to read by providing them with a variety of books and reading materials.

5. Reward them for reading:
   - Parents can reward children for reading by giving them a treat or by allowing them to do something special.
   - This can help children to see reading as a fun activity.

By focusing on these tips, parents can help their children to develop a love for reading and to become lifelong readers. Reading is a skill that can benefit children in all areas of their lives, from their academic success to their personal development. So let's all make an effort to encourage reading in our children and young people. Reading is a gift that keeps on giving. Let's share the gift of reading with the world. 整理完畢

Social Doctrine Seen Antidote to Reds

ROGOTA, Colombia (NC) — Archbishop Luis Caicedo Caro of Santa Marta has called for the adoption of the Social Doctrine of the Church to combat the spread of communism in Colombia. Speaking at a reception given by President of the Republic, Dr. Alfonso López Pumarejo, the archbishop said the doctrine is a "firm antidote to the cancer of communism".

The archbishop spoke to 300 businessmen who attended the gathering in Bogotá. "The doctrine" he said, "proves that modern man is not divided by a wall between the body and the spirit, between the material and the spiritual, between the human and the divine. It is a comprehensive view of man which sees in him a subject of rights, a subject of duties, a subject of responsibilities before God, a subject of duties towards himself, towards his fellow-men and towards society."

On his arrival in Colombia, the archbishop received a warm welcome from President López Pumarejo, who stated that he was extremely happy to see the archbishop in his country. He added that the Catholic Church is an integral part of Colombia's society.
