New Rules Given Knights of Malta

VATICAN CITY — Pope John has approved a new constitution for the Knights of Malta, the oldest order of chivalry in the Church.

The new constitution was announced at an audience to members of the supreme council of the Order of Malta, in the Galileo Room of the Pontifical Palaces on April 12.

The new constitution replaces the one that had been in force since 1946 and has been endorsed by the Knights of Malta.

The new constitution includes a number of changes, including the introduction of a new council of the order, which will be elected by the members of the order, and the establishment of a new executive committee, which will be responsible for the administration of the order.

The new constitution also includes provisions for the protection of the order’s traditions and history, and for the promotion of its charitable work.

The Knights of Malta, founded in 1099, is a Catholic military order that provides medical and emergency services in war zones and disaster areas.

Senate Subcommittee Approves School Construction Loans

WASHINGTON (SG) — A proposal for construction of new and expanded schools in various localities in the District was approved today by the Senate Subcommittee on School Construction Loans.

The program would entail the expenditure of $160 million in federal funds and provide $300 million in state funds for the construction of new schools and the expansion of existing facilities. It would provide $300 million a year for two years.

THE LOANS, which are to be made to local educational authorities, will be used for the construction and expansion of school facilities. The loans will be made on a 20-year basis.

In addition to the approved $300 million for schools, Congress has appropriated $150 million for the construction of postgraduate schools. Of this amount, $125 million is to be used for the construction of two Catholic schools.

In the next few days, a subcommittee will meet to consider the proposals for the construction of schools in the District.

SCIENTISTS in the United States have discovered a new type of radioactive element in the earth's crust. The element, which is called radium, has been identified by scientists as a highly potent neutron source.

The discovery of radium has opened up a new field of research in the study of nuclear physics. It has already led to the development of new methods for investigating the properties of atomic nuclei.

The element is not expected to be entirely pure, however, as it is likely to contain some impurities of other radioactive elements. These impurities may include elements such as uranium, thorium, and actinium.

The discovery of radium is of great importance to the scientific community, as it opens up new possibilities for the study of the properties of atomic nuclei. The findings of the new element may lead to a better understanding of the process of radioactive decay, as well as the properties of atomic nuclei in general.
Basic Problem in Spain Seen One of Censorship

By J. F. F. Thomas

The principal problem in Spain today is government censorship and the resulting lack of an authentically public opinion.

Censorship affects all other vital issues in government—foreign affairs, education, industry and Church-state relations.

Sunday, a Day of Rest

The U.S. Supreme Court, in one of the biggest civil rights cases of the year, on Friday ruled that a city ordinance requiring that women not work on religious holidays like Good Friday or Easter Sunday is an "unrea-lisitc justice." The court said the city of San Francisco had provided women with a periodic physical rest, but that the atmosphere of the workweek was "frozen" during such days, which is against the interests of women. The court's decision was based on the constitutional right to religious freedom and its corresponding right to free exercise of religion, which includes the right to practice one's religion on religious holydays. The court also said the city had not provided a reasonable alternative for workers to make up for the lost work time. The decision was upheld by Chief Justice John H. Harlan, who wrote that the city's policy of requiring women to work on religious days is in violation of the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution.

Freedom for All God's Children

In days gone by Independence Day, the Fourth of July, was always a day of joy for children. But nowadays parents may not always be as happy. This is because in the past, children had more freedom to enjoy themselves on this day. Nowadays, however, parents are more likely to restrict their children's activities. This is because they are concerned about their children's safety and well-being. Parents are also concerned about the impact of such activities on their workday schedule.

God's Creation of Sex Not a Sudden Move

By Frank J. Heer

Religious people, studying the Church's teaching on marriage and family, know well that God has established the rules that control our behavior in this area. Thus, we must not change these rules to suit our own desires, but must follow them as best we can.

At the Beaches

Of teenagers some say: It's a wonder they aren't all like us, reaping the harvest of our mistakes. Of others, they say: What a sorrowful generation! Either statement is just as true as the other. It is just a question of perspective. All teenagers have their faults, and all adults have faults. At times, we should remember that.

More in Praise Of Pittsburgh Labor

Editor:
I was extremely happy to seeMage Higgins praise the Pittsburgh Building Trade Council in an enterprising report, since too often the reports on labor unions are written by those with certain beliefs in Pittsburgh.

Mage Higgins analyses the working environment of the labor movement in Pittsburgh, particularly in the building trades. His article also discusses the current state of the labor movement in the city and introduces some ideas on how to improve it.

My only criticism is that Mage Higgins does not mention the Pittsburgh Labor Council, which is another important organization in the labor movement in Pittsburgh. I would like to suggest that Mage Higgins include this organization in his future reports on the labor movement in the city.

Best regards,

Recipe for Film ‘Turkey’: Stuff Theme with Sex

By William H. Morrice

Many of this year’s hit Hollywood movies would have gone great spots. In fact, in his new novel, “The Big Heat,” John Huston’s story is one of the greats. It is the story of the rich, the powerful, the men who control the Hollywood movie industry. It is the story of the “City of Lights,” the city that never sleeps.

Hollywood has always been a haven for theIEWS and the DREAMS of the world. But in recent years, the city has become a living nightmare. The Hollywood movie industry has become a jungle, a place where the weak are eaten alive by the strong.

For instance, a Hollywood movie star may come to Hollywood to make a movie. But instead of making a movie, he finds himself in the middle of a murder case. And not just any murder case. It’s a murder case that involves the highest levels of power and money.

But the star doesn’t give up. He fights back. He uses his movie star power totoList the powers that be. And in the end, he wins.

This is the story of the rich, the powerful, the men who control the Hollywood movie industry. It is the story of the “City of Lights,” the city that never sleeps.

25-Year-Old Papal Encyclical
On Movies Still Has Impact

NEW YORK (CNS) — The Vatican magazine Civilta Cattolica has released a new edition of its May 1965 encyclical "Vigilanti Cura," a document that Pope Paul VI established, as an encyclical-based, the Pivotal Films program and its new films in terms of its own presentation. The 25th anniversary edition emphasizes the document's influence on the movie industry, its continued value, and an ongoing challenge to moviemakers to continue to produce films that honor Christ in their work.

"It's important that the document continue to be published and its principles and objectives continue to be followed," said Msgr. John F. Corrigan, president of the Pro-lifers of America. "The document has a message that is timeless and applicable to all times and places, and it is a message that continues to be relevant today."

"Vigilanti Cura" was the first encyclical specifically to address the media and was the result of a request by the Vatican's Council of Cardinals to Pope Paul VI to issue a document that would guide the Catholic Church's relationship to the new medium of television. The encyclical contains principles and guidelines that moviemakers can use to produce films that are consistent with Catholic teaching and values.

The publication of "Vigilanti Cura" was part of an ongoing effort by the Vatican to engage with the media and to ensure that Catholic teachings are represented accurately in the media. The encyclical was a response to concerns about the influence of television on the faithful and to the need for greater coordination between the Church and the media.

Today, the document's influence is still evident in the media industry, with many filmmakers and producers citing it as a source of inspiration and guidance. The document's principles have been incorporated into the work of Catholic filmmakers and producers, and it remains a valuable resource for anyone involved in the media industry.

The 25th anniversary edition of "Vigilanti Cura" includes a new foreword by Msgr. Corrigan, who discusses the document's continued relevance and importance. The edition also includes a timeline of events related to the document, a list of films that have been produced in accordance with its principles, and a set of questions for discussion.

Jersey City Nun Tells What You Can Do for Mental Health

JERSEY CITY — A new front field in the world of mental health care was opened at a recent luncheon here on June 21 when 150 women attended a talk given by Sister Mary Graham, a member of the Sisters of St. Joseph of the Sports, whose five years of medical and mental health work in Africa is being told in a series of three lectures at St. Joseph's Church. (The Jersey City: 20th Century Press.)

Sister Mary, the 17-year-old crusader of the new front field of mental health care, was the guest speaker at the luncheon and gave a detailed account of her experiences in Africa during the past five years. She described how she and her colleagues, using a combination of medical and mental health care, have been able to help those in need in Africa.

The luncheon was held at the Women's Club of Jersey City, and was organized by the Jersey City Chapter of the New Jersey Mental Health Association.

Sister Mary said that her work in Africa has been a challenging one, but one that she has found extremely rewarding. She described the difficulties she faced in trying to bring mental health care to those who have previously been denied it. She talked about the importance of education and the need for more funding to support mental health care initiatives.

She also discussed the need for more international cooperation in mental health care, and the importance of sharing knowledge and resources with other countries.

Sister Mary's talk was well received by the attendees, who were impressed by her dedication and her commitment to improving the lives of those in need. The luncheon was a success, and it is hoped that more events like this will be held in the future to raise awareness and support for mental health care initiatives.

Pope Asks Teens to Be Apostolic

Following is a translation of an Italian-language address given by Pope John XXIII in young girls of Italian Catholic Youth at a meeting in Rome. The translation was prepared for the express use of the Holy See Press Office.

The message is particularly timely, he said, because the Church is at a new moment in its history. The Pope explained that the Church is currently engaged in a profound spiritual renewal. This renewal is not just a matter of internal changes, but involves the whole Church, down to the most humble among its members. The Pope emphasized that this renewal is not just something that the Church is doing, but is something that is happening to the Church. It is a change that is taking place within the Church, in the hearts of its members.

The Pope also spoke about the importance of prayer. He said that prayer is the foundation of the Christian life and that it is a way of living that is different from the world. The Pope emphasized that prayer is not just a matter of individuals or groups, but is something that the Church as a whole is doing. He said that prayer is the heart of the Church and that it is what makes the Church what it is.

The Pope concluded his address by asking the young people to be apostles, to be the ones who spread the Word of God. He said that the Church needs apostles, people who are willing to go out and share the good news of Jesus Christ. The Pope said that the Church needs young people who are willing to be apostles, who are willing to be the ones who spread the Word of God.
