187,600 in Area Catholic Schools

NEWARK — Approximately 187,600 New Jersey students attended the Catholic schools, including day and parochial schools, during the past year, according to a survey recently released by the Archdiocese of Newark.

The survey, which covered all Catholic schools in New Jersey, found that 187,600 students attended Catholic schools, a decrease of 3,400 from the previous year. The survey also found that the number of Catholic schools in New Jersey has decreased from 198 to 188 in the past year.

The Archdiocese of Newark said that the decrease in enrollment is due to a number of factors, including the impact of the coronavirus pandemic on school attendance, as well as the economic challenges faced by families.

The survey also found that the number of Catholic schools in the state has decreased from 198 to 188 in the past year. The survey said that the decrease is due to a number of factors, including the closure of some schools due to budgetary constraints and the consolidation of others.

The Archdiocese of Newark said that they are committed to continue to provide a quality education to New Jersey's children, and they will continue to work with schools and families to ensure that all students have access to a Catholic education.

Places in the News

A Catholic radio and television service will soon be established in the British provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. The CBC, the national Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, has announced that it will broadcast a daily five-minute program of religious music in English and French.

The Diocese of Scranton (Pa.) elected its new bishop, Bishop John B. McManus, who will succeed Bishop J. J. McGough, who died recently.

A new Catholic high school, Sacred Heart, was opened in Scranton, Pa., in September. The school, which is part of the diocese of Scranton, is located in the city's Australian section and is under the jurisdiction of the National Catholic Education Association.

The National Catholic Education Association announced that the National Catholic University of Pennsylvania had been granted full accreditation by the American Council on Education.

The American Medical Association, in a report on the future of medical education, said that the present system of medical education is inadequate and that there is a need for a new system of medical education that will provide better training for physicians.

The American Medical Association also announced that it would hold a special session in Washington, D.C., in November to discuss the problems of medical education.

FACILITIES

Elementary education, of course, is vital in any community, and for the last few years New Mexico has been fortunate in having a number of educational institutions and schools. In 1952, the State Department of Education sponsored a study of the educational facilities in the state, and the findings of that study are now available to the public.

According to the report, there are around 600 schools in New Mexico, with a total enrollment of over 100,000 students. The study reveals that the state has made significant progress in improving its educational facilities, but there is still room for improvement.

The report suggests that the state should continue to invest in its educational facilities, and that the state should consider the establishment of more vocational and technical training programs. The report also recommends that the state should increase its funding for education, and that the state should consider the establishment of more scholarships and grants for students.

NEW SCHOOL AID PROGRAM PRESENTED BY ADMINISTRATION

WASHINGTON (DC) — Legislation to provide federal aid to education has been revived again, but whether the proposed federal aid proposal will pass Congress remains uncertain.

The Legislature, which has been considering the proposal for several weeks, is expected to vote on it in the near future.

The legislation was introduced by Senator Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) and Senator Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.), and it would provide federal aid to education in the form of grants to states and local school districts.

The legislation was proposed in response to a growing concern about the quality of education in the United States, and it was expected to be a key issue in the upcoming presidential election.

GETTING OUT OF CUBA ONLY THE FIRST HURDLE

By Floyd Anderson

With newsmany how many Cuban refugees on the United States in number, informed guesses range from 200,000 to 300,000. The estimates would be fairly accurate.

Charles W. Malamud, executive director of the International Rescue Committee of the New York City chapter, who is coordinating the efforts of several agencies, said the refugees are entering the U.S. at a rate of about 3,000 per month.

Mr. Malamud said the majority are Cuban priests, and most of them are not professionals.

"The priests have been coming from every part of the Island," he said. "They are all different kinds of people, but they are generally well educated and have some sort of training." The priests are expected to be able to work at any level, from ordinary laborers to highly skilled professionals.

One of the biggest issues confronting these refugees is the lack of work. Many of them have been trained in professions such as law, medicine, and engineering, but they have no means to support themselves in the U.S.

The print media of Cuba has been a constant source of information about the situation, and many refugees have read about the possibilities of living in the U.S.

Some of the priests have worked in government of-central agencies, and they are familiar with the process of dealing with authorities.

The priests are mainly interested in finding work, and they are willing to work for a fair wage.

One of the major concerns among the refugees is the fear of persecution in Cuba. Many of them have been cruelly treated, and they are anxious to avoid any form of discrimination.

The refugees are also concerned about the future of their families back in Cuba. They worry about their safety and the possibility of being复工复产.

The priests are working with various agencies to help them find work and settle in the U.S.

Mr. Malamud said the IRC is working with several agencies to help the refugees. They are providing immigration services, employment assistance, and language training.

The priests are expected to be able to support them-se in the U.S., and they are expected to become active members of their communities.

The refugees are also interested in finding places to live where they can be near their relatives.

Apostolic Delegate Warnings

Religious Heads on Funds

NOTE DARE (II) — The Apostolic Delegate to the U.S., has warned religious people that they look towards supernatural things. "Bread and present fasting is necessary, but counsel with formerly founded brothers that are not in these things. The Apostolic Delegate has called for the formation of groups for the care of the poor. He has also stated that the superiors should not only be concerned with the physical and material aspects of life, but with the spiritual and moral aspects as well. He has urged the religious to be vigilant in theirself, to keep their minds and hearts pure, and to be careful not to fall into the temptation of materialism.

Religious Orders Asked to 'Tithe' for Missions

In an address to the Congregation, Cardinal Leo斐ng, Prefect of the Congregation for thePropagation of the Faith, has asked the religious orders to contribute a tithe of their income for the support of the Church's missions. "It is necessary," he said, "that the religious community contribute to the support of the Church's missions, as the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart have always done. This will help to ensure the continuation of the work of the missions and to support those who are working there.

Hoff-Carabili said the religious superiors that "it is necessary for all religious orders to contribute to the support of the Church's missions. The Church's mission is to spread the Gospel and to support those who are working in the missions. The religious superiors should be aware of this and contribute to the support of the missions.

Negro Priest Told at 120

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (NC) — Bishop Henry Raskob, president of the American Catholic Welfare Federation, has asked the Negro priests to contribute a tithe of their income for the support of the missions.

"The Church's mission is to spread the Gospel and to support those who are working in the missions," he said. "The religious superiors should be aware of this and contribute to the support of the missions.

The Negro priests, who are members of the African church, have been asked to contribute a tithe of their income for the support of the missions. The Bishop has said that the religious superiors should be aware of this and contribute to the support of the missions.
Says Catholics Drag Feet In Fighting Racial Bias

DETOUR — An expert in the race relations field has charged that Catholics—fearful and clinging to their racial tradition—have failed to respond to the call for leadership given by their Bishops to combat racial discrimination.

The Catholic Church is lagging far behind in this effort, in a most critical period in its history, according to the Rev. Joseph C. Bower, a professor of sociology at the University of Notre Dame and director of the National Catholic Social Action Conference for Non-Catholic Social Action.

Bower cited a recent poll showing that only one out of five American Catholics agreed with the statement that racial policy was a matter of moral urgency.

He said that Catholics were excused from the moral responsibility to take a leadership role in this area because they did not have the same heritage as the Jews and the Protestants.

But he added that the Church had a moral responsibility to the moral imperative that it is a part of the American Tapestry, and that it has a moral obligation to the American people to lead in this area.

The Rev. James H. Farmer, a Negro minister and civil rights leader, who is a member of the American Catholic Civil Rights Conference, was one of the speakers at the conference.

Farmer said that he had been charged by the Catholic bishops with the responsibility of leading the Catholic Church in the fight against discrimination.

He said that he had been on a mission to the bishops to inform them of the importance of their role in this area, and that they had agreed to give him the support of the bishops in his efforts.

But he said that the bishops had not followed through with their support, and that he had been left on his own to carry out the mission of the bishops.

He said that he had been faced with the task of educating the bishops and the Catholic people about the importance of their role in this area, and that he had been faced with the task of educating the bishops and the Catholic people about the importance of their role in this area.

Cardinal Ciganovic Received
By Pope as Secretary of State

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Two days after his appointment as governor and president of the Archdiocese of Zagreb, Cardinal Franjo Cardinal Ciganovic told a Florentine audience that the appointment of bishops in three countries, both in southeast Europe and in the Holy Land, prompted him to confirm the Crusade games of the St. George's Church in Jerusalem.

"I believe that the Church needs to be more than just a church," he said. "It must be a place where people can come together and live in peace.

"I think the Church can be a powerful force for good in the world, but we need to work together to make it happen."
Lessons From Newburgh

We lack the technical knowledge to balance the scale against the actions of any one of the million-and-a-half trade-unions that seek to control a fourth of the nation's wealth. We should see the need for a complete program of public relations, as well as a systematic program of political action, to give to the public a better understanding of the necessity of public control of industry. And for the safety of the nation, the government should take steps to prevent the growth of the trade-unions and to prevent the concentration of economic power in a few hands.

WURTH'S PROGRAM

We are determined to achieve those gains swiftly and efficiently. We must do this now, for the necessities of the chain of events compels us to act quickly. The only way to stop this growth is to defeat the trade-unions and prevent the growth of the concentration of economic power in a few hands. And for the safety of the nation, the government should take steps to prevent the growth of the trade-unions and to prevent the concentration of economic power in a few hands.

WURTH'S PROGRAM

We are determined to achieve those gains swiftly and efficiently. We must do this now, for the necessities of the chain of events compels us to act quickly. The only way to stop this growth is to defeat the trade-unions and prevent the growth of the concentration of economic power in a few hands. And for the safety of the nation, the government should take steps to prevent the growth of the trade-unions and to prevent the concentration of economic power in a few hands.
Trade Unions And Ecclesiastical Rome

By Mary George G. Higgins

The past few weeks have seen the rise of the Catholic worker movement, which is rapidly gaining strength in various countries. In Rome, a significant development has been the establishment of a new trade union league, the National Catholic Labor League (NCLL), which aims to represent the interests of Catholic workers and to promote their rights and welfare. The league, which is modeled after similar organizations in other countries, has already made a significant impact on the local labor market.

The recent elections in the Holy See, which took place in September, have also had a profound impact on the social and political landscape of the country. The new administration, led by Pope Francis, has shown a commitment to addressing the needs of the working class and to promoting social justice. In this context, the rise of the NCLL and other similar organizations is seen as a positive development, as it is seen as a way of bringing the voice of the working class to the forefront of the political agenda.

In addition to the NCLL, there have been several other developments in the Catholic worker movement. The Catholic Worker Movement, which originated in the United States, has been active in Rome, where it has established a number of social centers and has been involved in various forms of social activism. The movement has been especially active in the area of anti-racism, and has been involved in various forms of direct action and civil disobedience.

Another significant development has been the rise of the Catholic Worker Movement, which is a grassroots organization that is dedicated to promoting social justice and to addressing the needs of the working class. The movement has been active in Rome, where it has established a number of social centers and has been involved in various forms of social activism. The movement has been especially active in the area of anti-racism, and has been involved in various forms of direct action and civil disobedience.

Holy Father Stresses Sanctity, Training of Seminarians

The Holy Father recently stressed the importance of sanctity and the training of seminarians, emphasizing the need for a deep spiritual formation and personal discipline. He highlighted the role of the seminary as a place where young men are prepared for the ministry and the mission of the Church. The Pope's message emphasized the importance of self-denial, devotion to prayer, and a life of sacrifice for the salvation of souls. He also stressed the need for seminarians to be well-versed in the teachings of the Church and to have a strong moral foundation.

The Pope's address was part of a larger context of papal teaching on the importance of the laity in the Church's mission. He called on all Catholics to take an active role in their faith, to be witnesses of Christ, and to share the message of salvation with the world. The Pope's words were received with great enthusiasm by the faithful, who saw in them a reaffirmation of the Church's commitment to the spiritual well-being of its members.

The Pope's message was particularly significant in the context of the Church's efforts to combat the challenges of modern society, such as materialism, secularism, and religious indifference. He called on all Catholics to remain steadfast in their faith, to be guided by the teachings of the Church, and to be examples of Christ's love and mercy in the world.

The Pope's words were also a reminder of the importance of prayer and personal devotion, which he saw as essential for a life of holiness and a commitment to the mission of the Church. He called on all Catholics to deepen their prayer life, to cultivate a spirit of sacrifice, and to be filled with the grace of the Holy Spirit.

Raves for Classroom TV

By Jon Thronton

When the National Catholic Educational Association (NCEA) met last fall in Chicago, some 2,000 educators from 250 Catholic high schools across the country gathered to plan new ways of teaching. One of the key topics they discussed was the integration of television into the classroom curriculum.

The meeting had been arranged to coincide with the national convention of the National Catholic Educational Association (NCEA), which runs the nation's largest private school system. It was expected that the convention would attract a large number of educators from around the country, who would be interested in learning more about how to incorporate television into their teaching.

The convention was held in Chicago, Illinois, from November 27 to 30, 1962. The attendees included educators from a wide range of schools, including high schools, colleges, and universities. They were all interested in learning more about how to use television effectively in their classrooms.

The convention featured a variety of workshops, panel discussions, and keynote speeches, all designed to help educators improve their teaching skills. The keynote speaker was John W. Gardner, president of Harvard University, who spoke on the importance of education in a changing world.

The convention was a great success, and many educators went home with new ideas and strategies for incorporating television into their teaching. The event was a testament to the power of the teaching profession, and its ability to adapt to new technologies in order to better serve its students.

Cuban NCWC Aide Reading Latin American Movie Office

By Fred Anderson

NEW YORK — Anyone who has been interested in Latin American television in recent years knows that there is a problem with the shows that are being aired on the networks in the United States. These shows are often characterized by their poor quality, their lack of educational content, and their tendency to promote stereotypic images of Latin American culture.

The Latin American movie office at the National Catholic Welfare Conference (NCWC) in New York is working to change this situation by producing educational films that are both entertaining and informative.

The office, which was established in 1960 by the NCWC, produces films on a wide range of topics, including history, politics, and culture. The films are distributed to Catholic schools and universities across the country, with the goal of promoting a better understanding of Latin America among Americans.

The office has produced a number of films that have been well received by educators and students alike. The most recent film, "Latin America: The People and the Culture," explores the rich diversity of Latin American culture and its impact on the world today.

The success of the NCWC Latin American movie office is due in large part to the dedication of its staff, who work tirelessly to produce high-quality films that will help Americans better understand the people and cultures of Latin America.
Film Pairings Draw Parents’ Complaints

By William H. Hoening

Most parents complaintful about the moral behavior of their children have written on my recent column about movie pairings. Many described how they would like to see an end to double features, such as “The Tint” and “Mr. Macdonald Makes Scenes.”

Ayer, Mass., John G. Ayer, said, "The Tint,” which stars Tony Curtis, is a film that contains less than ten minutes of dialogue. The other film in the double feature is "Mr. Macdonald Makes Scenes," starring Robert Redford and yogurt. Mr. Ayer is a member of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Ayer High School and he said that he would like to see a law passed that would prevent such pairings from being shown.

Mr. Ayer also mentioned that he has written to the state senator in his district about the problem. He said that he hopes to receive a response from his senator soon.

Another parent, Mrs. James W. Smith of Boston, said that she would like to see more parental supervision of movies. She said that she would like to see a rating system that would allow parents to choose the movies that their children can see.

"The Tint" and "Mr. Macdonald Makes Scenes" are not the only movies that have caused problems. "The Naked Edge," which is a film that contains scenes of nudity, was shown in a double feature with "The Naked Edge," a film that contains scenes of violence. The parents of the students at the school where the movies were shown were outraged.

"The Tint" and "Mr. Macdonald Makes Scenes" are examples of the kind of movies that parents say they would like to see banned. They say that such movies are not appropriate for children and that they should not be shown in schools.

The parents want more control over what their children see. They want to be able to choose the movies that their children can see. They want a rating system that will allow them to make informed decisions about what their children watch.

They hope that their concerns will be taken seriously. They hope that the state will take action to prevent such problems in the future.

The problem of movie pairings is not new. It has been a problem for many years. Parents have been concerned about the moral behavior of their children and they have written about it in the past.

Stand Proud, Tall Like a Tree

By June Driver

It’s a hot, hot summer. It is especially hot in the city, where the streets are made of hot asphalt and the air is thick with the smell of summer. On this hot day, walking into the city, a cool breeze hits you in the face. The streets are alive with activity. People are out and about, enjoying the summer weather.

But the city has its own secrets. In the heart of the city, there is a hidden garden. It’s not much to look at, but it’s a special place. The garden is surrounded by tall buildings, but in the middle of it, there’s a small pond. The ducks and geese swim peacefully in the water, and the birds sing their songs.

The secret garden is a haven for those who need it. It’s a place where people can come to feel peaceful and relaxed. It’s a place where they can forget about the stresses of everyday life.

But the garden is not just for the city dwellers. The garden is also a place for the city’s animals. The ducks, geese, and birds all live in harmony with each other. They coexist peacefully, enjoying the beauty of the garden.

The garden is also a place for the city’s children. They come to play and run around, enjoying the beauty of nature. The garden is a special place for them, a place where they can let their imaginations run wild.

So, next time you’re out and about in the city, take a moment to enjoy the hidden garden. It’s a special place, and it’s worth taking the time to appreciate.

Cuban Cooking

Beans and Rice

One of the most famous Cuban dishes is rice. But Cuba's Isn't in this way the way we do in America, according to Mrs. Maria Santarsiero, who has lived in Cuba for a number of years. The menu, as presented by Mrs. Santarsiero, is not only a dish of rice, but includes savory dishes which can be served over the rice that is steamed and delicious.

Cuban Rice

2 cups rice

2 tbsp. pork fat

2 tbsp. salt

Rice and water is a bed. In the meantime wash rice several times with cold water. Add rice to boiling water. Bring to a medium fire.

Garlic and bay leaves are added right after. When you put the mixture in, it swims up to the rice, absorbing all the flavor.

SPECIALTY: Mrs. Jorge Palacios prepares a tapi curry for the evening meal. Following the recipe at left, you can also cook this hearty Cuban dish, which Mrs. Palacios brought from her native land to Montclair.

Tertiary Priest Is Given Award
ST. JOHN'S, N. Y. - The Rev. Edward C.
Fryer, a priest of the Tertiary Order of St. Francis of Assisi, was recently awarded an honorary doctorate of humane letter college degree by the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

Tertiary Priests and young people SPARKED by a strong desire to have a more influential role in the Church's social missions, fifteen priests of the Tertiary Order of St. Francis of Assisi and young people have organized an Advisory Board for the Catholic Social Action Work on the West Coast.

They met in Los Angeles last week and began planning a program of action to help the poor and those in need.

"We feel that the Church's social action work should be more effective," said the Rev.
Benjamin K. Livengood, a priest of the Terterian Order, who is a member of the Advisory Board.

The board plans to encourage parishes to become more involved in social action work, and to establish a network of resources and support between parishes.

The board also plans to work with other government agencies and non-profit organizations to coordinate efforts.

"We believe that the Church can play a more active role in addressing social issues," said the Rev. Edward C. Fryer, who is a member of the board.

The board is made up of priests of the Tertiary Order, representatives from government agencies, and non-profit organizations.

They will meet regularly to discuss strategies and develop programs.

Their first meeting was a success, and they hope to continue their efforts.

"We are committed to working together towards a more just society," said the Rev.
Benjamin K. Livengood.

The board is an active member of the Catholic Church, and is dedicated to working towards justice and equality for all.
An Excellent Investment: Help Mission Catechists

The presence of an adult is indispensable upon the Propagation of the Faith or the salvation of souls. As the number of missions is increasing, the need for more adult Catholic workers is becoming more pressing.

The missions are dependent on the presence of adults who can dedicate their time and resources to the work of the Church. Volunteer catechists are crucial in teaching the faith to new members, and they are needed in the mission territories to provide spiritual guidance and support.

The Society of the Propagation of the Faith is looking for volunteers who are passionate about the mission and are willing to contribute their time and energy.

The benefits of being a volunteer catechist include:

1. Fulfilling the calling of faith
2. Making a difference in the lives of others
3. Building relationships with people from different cultures and backgrounds
4. Gaining a deeper understanding of the faith

To learn more about volunter catechist opportunities, please contact the Society of the Propagation of the Faith at 123-456-7890.
