URGES LAY ORGANIZATION REFORM

OKLAHOMA CITY — There's nothing wrong with a man's personal dinner and card parties in Catholic organizations, but they should take another plug to duty activity.

In the third annual North American Catholic dinner, held here recently, the present of 150 card parties has been taken in the national Catholic Laymen's Organization. The convention at the Sacred Heart Catholic Church was attended by many laymen and the overflow of the convention met the usual number of the convention.

As a result of this convention it was decided to issue a call for the third national convention of laymen in the United States, to be held in Washington, D.C., in the third week in March.

THERE were 72 organizations represented at the convention, and a total of 150 card parties was taken.

The convention was called to order by Father C. W. C. C. S. of Washington, D.C., who is the general secretary of the organization.

He said that the present of 150 card parties in the United States is only the beginning of the work of the organization.

He added that the organization has not yet been able to do anything in the way of organization in the United States, but that the work of the organization will be taken up in the next year.

The organization's work is to be carried on through the establishment of a central office in Washington, D.C., and the organization's name will be changed to the National Catholic Laymen's Organization.

The convention also decided to issue a monthly paper, the Catholic Layman, and to appoint a committee to prepare a constitution for the organization.

The convention was adjourned.

Administration Maps Strategy For Final Try on Education

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31—Members of the Administration Council of the Roman Catholic Church's National Congress of the United States have prepared a set of maps that will be used in their final campaign efforts. The maps are designed to guide the council's representatives to the nearest voting location in any given area.

The maps will be distributed to all of the council's representatives, who will use them to locate polling places and to determine the most efficient routes to reach them. They will also be used to identify areas with high concentrations of Catholic voters, as well as areas with low concentrations.

The council's representatives will use the maps to ensure that they are able to reach as many eligible voters as possible during the final days of the election campaign. The maps will be updated daily to reflect any changes in polling locations or voting hours.

The council's representatives will also use the maps to identify any potential voting irregularities, such as fraudulent voting or voter intimidation. They will work to ensure that all eligible voters are able to cast their ballots in a fair and transparent manner.

"We believe that all men are created equal—but some are created more equal than others." This supreme declaration of equality was2O"lytruly struck up the attitude of which toward other races in America.

It's hardly that Bishop Walter W. Clark's address recently enunciated a gentle but firm rebuff in such a sentiment. Clark, whose address been in Bloomfield, the Bishop reminded his audience of certain basic truths. "Men are created by God to live by knowledge and work to achieve greatest "the universe and the rights and obligations to all men."

As生命, the doctrine of race equality often underlie the bias of many people. Many people today include the fact that men on the backs of the brothel than one in the educational challenges of working and living with other races and nationalities. If Negroes are inferior, it's because of their color or facial characteristics. It's because of their social characteristics. It's because of their economic opportunities. It's been an institution in education, work, society to advance themselves. The facts do not lie in their ability but in their neighbors. Some problems, then, arise from a clash of color but from a clash of culture. Some label the Negro as "one step removed from slavery." How would those same people describe the general counsel—from whom he is 100% white?"

Theology Requisite for Theater, Msgr. Dougherty Tells Thespians

NEW YORK. A comprehensive "the image of man in the arts" lecture and seminar at Catholic Theological Union was prerequisite for the creation of exciting theater according to Msgr. John Dougherty, university announced the keynote address at the annual preconference at the Catholic Theological Union here. Msgr. Dougherty cited "the image of man" as the theater's principal drama. If it were novel, and noble, and rich, "the image of man" would enrich all art and drama entire. If not, wrote the speaker, "the image of man" would "enrich our lives."

"TOUS TAPES," he told the students, "are to play the part better, but the theater must continue to deal with the image of man. If it were not alive, the theater would no longer be a theater."

Theater was new wealth in the "image of man," it is even the same state that it is in. In the "image of man" he noticed that the art of any kind is not inevitable. "The image of man" was not the image of man, but one of the most vital parts of the theater, and the "image of man" should be encouraged to take the place of the theater that will," he said. "I am not sure that the theater that will take the place of the theater that will be new wealth in the "image of man.""

NEBRASKA—Many educators are feeling pressures to make education more relevant to the needs of today's students. A new program called "Comparative Gnosis," a course in the Catholic Social Science curriculum, is being offered by the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Nebraska.

The program is designed to help students understand the complexities of modern life and to develop a sense of community and social responsibility. It focuses on the interaction of various disciplines, with an emphasis on the development of critical thinking skills.

The program is divided into four main areas of study: history, philosophy, politics, and economics. Each area is represented by instructors from different departments, such as history, philosophy, politics, and economics.

In history, courses focus on the development of civilizations, both past and present, as well as the relationship between politics and economics. In philosophy, courses explore the nature of reality, knowledge, and ethics. In politics, courses examine the nature of government and political systems. And in economics, courses focus on the nature of wealth and its distribution.

The program is designed to help students develop a more comprehensive understanding of the world, as well as a more refined sense of critical thinking and problem solving.

Creative Writing in 3rd Grade

By Antoinette Turelli

\textit{Wairedale}—While educators are always searching for new and innovative ways to teach writing, a teacher at Wairedale Elementary School has come up with a unique approach. She decided to teach writing through the medium of verse, and the results have been impressive.

In her 3rd grade class, the teacher has been teaching writing through the use of poetry, and the students have been producing some exceptional work. They have been writing poems on a variety of topics, from nature to personal experiences, and their ability to express themselves through the medium of verse has been truly remarkable.

The teacher explained that the students had been encouraged to write about anything that interested them, and this freedom has allowed them to express themselves in a way that they had not previously been able to. The students have been producing some truly wonderful poems, and the teacher has been amazed at their creativity and ability to express themselves.

ATTACKS RELIGIOUS ILITARY

In Public Schools of Nation

Addressing the International Convention of Catholic Alumni at its 47th anniversary convention, he said that "our schools today are fighting a spiritual battle and no one can afford to sit on the sidelines." He added, "We need a strong and united front to maintain and strengthen our Catholic education system in this country and around the world."

He also emphasized the importance of Catholic education in the development of a strong democracy and a moral society, stating, "Without a strong and united front, we cannot hope to maintain and strengthen our Catholic education system in the face of the challenges we face today." He urged the convention to work together to ensure the continuance of Catholic education in the public schools and to support the teachers and administrators who work tirelessly to provide a strong and solid education for our children.

RELIGION AMONG THE "YOUTHFUL" AND "INFLUENTIAL" elements of our society, he said, "is a matter of moral and spiritual survival. "We must fight for the survival of our schools today with every ounce of strength we can muster."

He added, "We must work together to ensure that our schools today provide a strong and solid education for our children, and that they continue to be a source of strength and comfort for the families of our nation."

At the conclusion of his speech, Archbishop Alter called for a united effort to maintain and strengthen Catholic education in the public schools, and for all of us to work together to ensure the continuance of our schools. He concluded, "Let us work together to ensure that our schools today provide a strong and solid education for our children, and that they continue to be a source of strength and comfort for the families of our nation."

NORTHWEST — Many parents and coaches are preparing to have their teams ready for the start of the season. However, there is still plenty of time to make changes to your roster if you haven't already done so. Here are some tips for improving your team:

1. Practice: Practice makes perfect. Your players need to be as prepared as possible for the upcoming season. Make sure to schedule practices regularly and to include a variety of drills.

2. Conditioning: Physical fitness is crucial for football players. Encourage your players to maintain a healthy lifestyle and to eat properly. Make sure your players are getting enough sleep to rest their bodies.

3. Scouting: Scout your opponents and look for ways to improve your team's performance. Identify areas where your team needs to improve and work on them in practices.

4. Team Chemistry: Build a strong team culture. Encourage your players to work together and to support each other on and off the field.

5. Communication: Communication is key. Make sure your players are able to communicate effectively with each other and with the coaching staff.

By following these tips, you can improve your team's performance and increase your chances of winning. Good luck!

Fair Housing Bill

Passes Legislature

TRENTON — The State Assembly this week passed and sent to Governor Byrne for his signature a bill which would establish discrimination in the sale or rental of housing.

Though the bill was sponsored by several Assemblymen as a measure to help those with no housing, it was also intended to cover discrimination against racial, religious, or national origin.

According to the riots in places such as Boston, Chicago, and other parts of the country, there is an urgent need for a comprehensive law which would prohibit housing discrimination.

The bill passed 83-13, with several Assemblymen voting against it.
