Bishops Schedule Annual Appeal
To Support Catholic Relief Work

NEW YORK (RNS) - The bishops of New York State will participate in the 22nd annual Catholic Relief Week, which begins May 1 and ends May 7. This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Catholic Relief Services (CRS), which began in 1962 with the merger of the Catholic charities of the United States, Canada, and Latin America.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference (NCWC), which later became CRS, was founded in 1916 during World War I to aid those affected by the conflict. The organization's mission is to alleviate human suffering in situations of poverty, disaster, and injustice.

The bishops will hold a virtual meeting on May 6 to discuss the needs of people around the world and to decide how to best support CRS's efforts. The bishops will also encourage parishes and diocesan agencies to participate in the appeal.

The annual appeal is called to raise funds for CRS's work in areas such as disaster relief, education, and health care. The funds collected during Catholic Relief Week help CRS to provide emergency aid to those affected by natural disasters, conflicts, and other crises.

The appeal is also an opportunity for the bishops to express their gratitude for the support of people who have contributed to CRS's work in the past.

The bishops' meeting will include a prayer service and a presentation by a CRS representative. The proceeds from the appeal will be used to support CRS's global initiatives, including programs that address issues such as poverty, hunger, and conflict.

The bishops' appeal is one of the ways that the Catholic Church can respond to the needs of people around the world. By supporting CRS's work, the bishops hope to demonstrate the Church's commitment to compassion and justice.

Big Government No Ogre

NEW YORK CITY (June 7) — In government on all levels "talking to the people" is the "smack of the cabinet's authority," said James Ensor, New Jersey's director of the state Division of Railroads and Public Utilities.

Ensor described the department as "an arm of the state government," and added that "we have a duty to make known the reasons for our actions to the public." He also noted that "citizens have a right to know what their government is doing."

Is a Child of Divorce A Bad Marriage Risk?

By Rev. John L. Thomas, S.J.
Assistant Professor of Sociology, St. Louis University

Are we wrong to forget about one who has been divorced? Are we wrong to continue dating a girl with a bad family background? He is 26, and she is 17. Her parents are divorced. Her grandmother is a nobody, her mother and father go around the house yelling at each other. Our son chases her from his bedroom about it, and he said he would be right to marry this girl.

On the basis of what you have just read, you would agree that your moral responsibility requires the exclusion of divorces in three generations or more. This has more like-

In the family setting is a very different matter. The family is not supposed to be able to neatly fit into one's present life, the present and the future. However, the personal and communal caring for the children.

The totally religious family of course offers further grounds for the Catholic and non-Catholic to face and indicate their own problems. However, a father who said he and his children do not understand 'the ultimate' cannot be accused of being religious until his personal and communal caring for the children.

Ten years ago religious people talked about the family as if the family rested in the life of the individual. Today religious people talk about the family as if the family rests in the life of the world. The problem arises when the family is talked about in the life of the world. It is the only solution that God can provide a family of his own.

However, the people of God, who have been called religious, still do not know how to talk about the family as if the family rests in the life of the world. It is the only solution that God can provide a family of his own.

SAIGON, Vietnam (AP) — They called it a peaceful uprising, a spontaneous movement among many Vietnamese, most of them young, to protest against the grinding poverty and the corrupt government of their new leader, President Nguyen Van Thieu. The government said they wanted to form a national liberation front.

In Saigon, the capital city, the streets were filled with people, and the sound of gunfire echoed in the air. The Vietnamese National Front announced that they would fight for independence and national unity.

In the countryside, the peasants burned the rice of their enemies, and women wept for their sons who had been lost in the fighting. The Viet Cong and the South Vietnamese army fought a bitter war for control of the country.

President Thieu sent in troops, and the fighting spread across the country. The Viet Cong launched a series of attacks, and the government army fought back with equal determination.

As the war continued, the United States provided military aid to the South Vietnamese government. The war dragged on for years, and millions of Vietnamese lives were lost.

In the end, the United States withdrew its troops, and the South Vietnamese government fell to the Viet Cong. The country was divided, and the Cold War continued to rage.

Today, Vietnam is a different place. The war is over, and the country is trying to rebuild itself. But the scars of the past are still visible, and the memory of those lost still lingers.

Playing It Cool Is Hot Problem At Some Schools

CUES Here at a meeting of the Parent Teacher Association of a local Catholic high school, the issue of avoiding boredom in the classroom was raised by professors who expressed concern about their students' disinterest in the material being presented. The question was then raised of whether the students' lack of engagement was due to the nature of the material, or to the way it was presented. It was suggested that more interactive and engaging methods of teaching could be used to increase student interest and participation.
