Shun Materialism to Fight Reds, Exiled Havana Auxiliary Says

WASHINGTON, June 17 — Cardinal Cramer, Havana's auxiliary bishop, today urged Cubans to fight the Communist threat by laying down materialism, which he termed "the poison" of the Castro regime.

"We must struggle against the poison of materialism," the cardinal said in a letter broadcast over Cuban radio. "Materialism is the poison that destroys the soul of the Cuban people.

"We have been told that materialism is the only way to achieve the good life. But the good life is not measured by material wealth. It is measured by spiritual growth and the fulfillment of our duties to God and our fellow human beings.

"We must not be blinded by the lure of material gain. We must remember that true happiness comes from serving others and living a life of prayer and charity.

"Let us remember the words of the apostle Paul, who said, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." This is the true measure of our happiness.

"Let us reject the false teaching of materialism and embrace the true teachings of Jesus Christ. Let us pray for the salvation of Cuba and the liberation of its people from the scourge of communism.

We have been studying the conception of Our Lord as the Saviour in the world, and have observed that he was the Son of Mary, the bond maiden of Jesus. This is the common belief of Church tradition, and it is the accepted view of the Catholic Church.

The conception of Jesus Christ was a mystery of faith, and it is impossible to prove it by natural reasoning. However, the Church

Social Reform in Latin America Depends largely on Education

By REV. FREDERICK A. MCMAHON, C.M.

Father McMahon, the expert commentator known for his enlightening presentations on Latin America, has recently published a comprehensive article in the November issue of the Holy Cross Review. In his article, he emphasizes the crucial role of education in the social reform of Latin America. The article delves into the pressing issues of poverty, inequality, and the need for education to empower the masses.

Father McMahon stresses that education is not just an end in itself but a means to an end. It is a tool for transforming society, fostering a spirit of cooperation, and breaking down the barriers that perpetuate poverty and inequality. He highlights the importance of education in empowering the underprivileged, providing them with the skills and knowledge necessary to take control of their lives and participate in the development of their communities.

The article also touches upon the challenges faced by educators in Latin America. It discusses the need for greater investment in education, the importance of teacher training, and the necessity of creating an educational system that is responsive to the needs of the people.

Furthermore, Father McMahon points out that education should not be seen as a luxury but as a fundamental human right. He calls for a commitment from governments, educators, and the international community to ensure that every child has access to quality education.

In conclusion, Father McMahon's article is a clarion call for action. It underscores the importance of education in the social reform of Latin America and urges all stakeholders to take responsibility for creating a more equitable and just society.
IT HAPPENS every Monday at 8 a.m. in Bishop Fahey's living room: 15-year-olds get together for breakfast and join him in prayer. These boys, who have been brought up in the Catholic tradition, begin their day by being reminded of the importance of faith.

The boys, who are from all walks of life, have come to the Vatican's Youth Retreat to learn more about their religion. They are participating in a program that teaches them about the history and teachings of the Church.

The boys are part of a larger group of young people who are attending the retreat. They are united in their desire to learn more about their faith and to grow closer to God.

The retreat is an opportunity for them to reflect on their own lives and to consider how they can live their lives according to the teachings of the Church.

Joining Bishop Fahey for breakfast are some of the retreatants, who share their experiences and insights on the retreat.

The boys are grateful for the opportunity to learn more about their faith and to connect with others who share their beliefs. They are excited to continue their journey of faith and to grow closer to God.
Sometimes We Can Find a Way
To Say I Love You, Mom, Dad

By JUNE DREW

"Oh, it's the car I love you. I love you so much. I love you to the world that you would want to go with me."

We're like that with our parent's love. We say it, and they say it to us. And then, when they go on to the world that we would want to go with them, we may not even realize it. But it's there, and it will always be there. We're near and dear to each other's hearts, even if we don't understand after all.

What One Book Is Able to Do
By MURG, WILLIAM F. FURLONG

The news could help but feel important when she realized that she had written a novel that had become a bestseller, winning awards and being adapted into a successful film. She had always dreamed of becoming an author and she was elated to see her work gain recognition. She had spent countless hours in her writing room, pouring her heart and soul into her stories.

Amidst the early morning sun, she took a seat on her porch swing to enjoy the warmth of the day. The gentle breeze through the trees provided a soothing sound as she reunited with her favorite book. She smiled as she read the words she had written so long ago, feeling a sense of pride and accomplishment.

As she closed her eyes, she knew that she had completed her life's work. She had written a story that would live on for generations to come. She knew that her book would continue to inspire others, just as it had inspired her.

The sun began to set, casting a golden hue over the landscape. She watched the world around her, knowing that her book would be a timeless treasure, a keepsake for future generations. She dedicated that moment to all the readers who would come to love her story as much as she did.

Her work was not just a story, but a reflection of her own experiences and emotions. She knew that her book would continue to touch hearts and minds for years to come.

Barbara L. Reynolds, a teacher at St. Mary's Academy, was thrilled to learn that her novel, "The Rosemary Shrine," had been selected as the winner of the prestigious Literary Award. She had dedicated her life to teaching and helping others, and now her work as an author had been recognized.

As she sat on her porch swing, she reflected on the journey that had led her to this moment. She knew that her work would continue to inspire others, just as she had been inspired by the stories of others. She felt a sense of pride and accomplishment knowing that her book would live on for generations to come.

As the sun set, she took one last look at the world around her, knowing that her book would be a timeless treasure, a keepsake for future generations. She dedicated that moment to all the readers who would come to love her story as much as she did.

Requiem Held for Father Kuo, Refugee From Red China

NEWARK — A priest who spent 21 years as a refugee from Red China was buried in the most Catholic city of the nation, his friends say, and was interred in the Novena Church, a Catholic institution in this city.

Father Kuo was born in China, where he spent most of his life, and was an active member of the Catholic Church. He was ordained a priest in 1923 and served in several churches in China before being forced to flee to Japan in 1937.

His body was sent to the United States in 1945, and he was received into the Church here in 1948. He served as a priest in several churches in New Jersey, including St. Mary's Church in Newark.
