Milanese Lawyer Elected to Head Knights of Malta

RIO DE JANEIRO (NC) — Angelo de Donatis, an Italian lawyer and former ambassador to Brazil, was elected yesterday to head the historical order of the Knights of Malta, an ancient religious military order.

The order, which traces its origins to the 11th century, is headquartered in Rome and is known for its medical and humanitarian work, including the operation of hospitals and charities.

De Donatis, who served as Brazil’s ambassador to Rome from 2000 to 2005, was chosen by fellow knights in a special meeting that took place in the Knights of Malta’s headquarters in Rome.

The Knights of Malta, also known as the Order of St. John, was founded by the Byzantine Emperor Constantine VIII in 1099. The order played a significant role in the Crusades and has a long history of providing aid to those in need.

De Donatis, who has a degree in law from the University of Milan, has also served as a judge in the Vatican’s court and has been involved in various diplomatic missions.

As head of the Knights of Malta, de Donatis will work to continue the order’s tradition of service and support for those in need around the world.

Rift in Spain

(Continued from Page 12) The controversy, which has divided the Spanish government and the Catholic Church, has deepened since the early 1990s. The government, which has always been wary of ecclesiastical influence, has accused the Church of using its influence to shape public opinion and political decisions.

The government has also clashed with the Church over issues such as education, social welfare, and the role of the Church in public life.

The Church, on the other hand, has said that it is simply exercising its right to speak out on issues of public concern and that it has a moral obligation to do so.

The power struggle has intensified in recent years, with the government and the Church both accusing each other of trying to control public opinion.

Pinpoint Difference In College Grades

WASHINGTON (UCN) — Recent statistics at Catholic colleges last year lend itself to the belief that the success rate in public schools is higher than that in Catholic colleges. How can this be? The answer lies in the differences between the two types of schools.

The traditional Catholic college, on the average, pays more attention to the individual student. The student is not just a number, but a person with his own special needs. The teacher is not just a person who teaches, but a person who cares for his students.

Moreover, the Catholic college has a more diverse student body. This diversity means that there are more opportunities for intellectual growth and cultural enrichment.

In conclusion, while both types of schools have their advantages and disadvantages, it is clear that the Catholic college provides a more holistic education for its students.

Bias Far Excellence

The Senior Chaplain of the U. S. Air Force Catholic Church today launched a tirade against "un-American" elements.

"The war would be fought, as it must be fought, because the American people, not the government, have asked for it."

But, he added, "We are not the government."

The "un-American" elements, he declared, were "not only those who are actively engaged in promoting revolution or disloyalty, but also those who are passively supporting such efforts."

The Chaplain concluded by calling for a "united front" against these elements, and by urging all Americans to "stand together in this great national crisis."

Wealth of Galilee Not for the Masses

By FRANK J. REESE

The Gospel gives six de tils about this story. God did not come, the man was not in the field, and no one could see the man or the field. God had shown this to the man in the field, and no one else could see it."

"But, " the Chaplain continued, "there are many people who are not willing to accept this simple truth. They believe that God is not present in this world, that He is not working through men and events, and that what we see around us is merely the result of chance." "The truly devout," he concluded, "are those who accept the teachings of the Gospel and who believe that God is present in every aspect of our lives."

Editor:
 It is not only that legislative action in regulating the distribution and consumption of tobacco is a matter of interest, but it is also a matter of concern to the public health.

Communications with this topic are sometimes characterized by enthusiasm and emotionalism. This is not an unusual occurrence, as individuals often express strong feelings on issues they view as affecting their well-being. Nonetheless, it is important to approach such discussions with a critical and balanced perspective.

Such legislation, if well-designed and implemented, can contribute to promoting public health by reducing the negative consequences of tobacco use. It is crucial to consider the potential benefits and drawbacks of such policies, ensuring that they are grounded in evidence and supported by sound principles.

Bishops See Catholic Family Life in Danger

The Church in Latin America

Bishops in Latin America are calling for an end to the widespread practice of forced or coerced abortion, as well as the legal recognition of same-sex unions.

The bishops, in a statement released last week, said that the Church's teaching on the sanctity of life is not meant to be used as a tool to suppress women's reproductive rights or to justify violence against transgender people.

They also called for the end of discrimination against people of faith, particularly those who are marginalized or discriminated against because of their religious beliefs.

The bishops further urged the government to take steps to ensure the protection of human rights and the rule of law.

In recent years, the government of President Daniel Ortega has been criticized for its crackdown on NGOs, human rights activists, and members of the opposition. Just last month, the government anunci...
Public Schoolers Have Own Nuns

BY ANTONETTE TOMONELLI

NEWARK — The truth of the story of the Catholic schoolgirls from Orange who were thrilled to see their religious education teacher, a nun, in the neighboring town of South Orange where she teaches Spanish, was revealed by the Teachers who watch the girls in Orange.

The arrangement back when 30 years ago, in the time of Rev. Michael O’Keefe, when the Orange School for Girls, B.M. of St. Joseph, was part of the same system, was in existence once again.

With the advent of the integration movement in Orange, the problem was no longer a matter of concern. It is now one of the many issues of concern to the students and the Faculty, who teach the girls.

The teachers, however, are still concerned about the girls’ welfare. They will continue to watch the girls, but they will not continue to teach them. They will go back to their own schools the next year. As the problem is not a matter of concern, they will continue to watch the girls.

Devotion to Mary
Can Do Much

BY MRS. WILLIAM F. FURLONG

Catholic can be like our model. If, of course, our Blessed Lord promised that in His Church there would be no barren fields, He must have promised also that there would be no barren breasts. If, therefore, your heart is hungry for deeper faith, richer devotion, and more love of God and the Church, you will find no better way to satisfy your desire than to take a special devotion to the Blessed Virgin.

I have one such devotion myself. It is one of the simplest I know. I try to say every day the little prayer I learned in school as a child. I say it on my way to Mass, on the bus, when I can't say the whole prayer, and also during my quiet moments. I have found this little practice so helpful that I have decided to keep it even after I am in the habit of my regular prayer. I find it very satisfying to say the prayer and I am much more determined to keep the rest of my prayers.

I suppose what I really mean is that I am determined to become a Catholic. I am not sure what I mean by Catholic but I know that I am very conscious of myself.
I am not sure if I am right or wrong but I am sure that I am determined to become a Catholic. I am not sure why I am determined to become a Catholic but I know that I am very conscious of myself. I am not sure if I am right or wrong but I am sure that I am determined to become a Catholic. I am not sure why I am

Third Order Congress June 10

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Leaders of the National Catholic Lay Congress have called upon the U.S. Justice Department to reverse its controversy over the strength of lay organizations.

"The board argued that cijm's emphasis on lay organization of American laymen is starting to be realized in a time when national unity is even more needed," said the board, which approved the board's statement.

"PERSONS WISHING to have the question resolved have been asked of the national organization for the same purpose, and the board of directors has been asked to reverse its position on the strength of lay organizations," said the board.

2 More Dioceses

John Men's Council

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two new diocesan councils have been formed, one in the National Council of Catholic Men and another in the National Council of Catholic Women.

"The purpose of these councils is to give the layman an opportunity to be heard and an opportunity to have a voice in the formation of the councils," said the board.

Unveil St Catherine Statue
