Course Objectives:
U.S. involvement in the Middle East began in early 1800s, but it was not until the World War II that the Middle East became a priority for U.S. administrations. The creation of the state of Israel further reinforced U.S. involvement in the Middle East political equations and international relations. The United States is currently the most influential foreign power in the Middle East, but it is far from the most popular. A history of U.S. involvement in the Middle East during the Cold War, its special relations with Israel and its efforts at forging alliance with certain Middle Eastern countries are among the topics to be discussed in this course. Challenges to U.S. hegemony in the region particularly the impact of the September 11th events including American military intervention in Afghanistan and Iraq and disputes over Iran's nuclear program will be also examined in the course, exploring prospects for future U.S. ties with the Middle East in the next decade.

Required Textbook:

Recommended:
The 9/11 Commission Report
The above books, as assigned, are required reading for the course. Additional reading assignments will be added during the course of the semester due to the changing nature of certain topics including the Syrian crisis, the rise of the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS) as well as Iranian nuclear issue.

Course Requirements:
Students will be graded on the following basis:
1) Class Participation (20 percent of course grade): Students are expected to attend all class sessions, to read all assigned materials prior to class, and to take part actively in discussions.
2) A term paper of 12-15 pages with at least ten references (not including the textbooks), on a topic to be approved beforehand by the professor. Due April 29 and counts 40 percent of the final grade. Students will present their research topic in class in 10 minutes followed by five minutes of discussions by the other students.
3) Take home final exam for which essay type questions will be provided on April 29 and must be received by May 6. It will cover the entire course, lectures and readings, counting 40 percent of the final grade. Students can choose three out of five questions and write 2-page essay for each.
