Cardinal Mindszenty Exile Nearing End?

ROSE (CIC) — An Austrian Catholic paper to visit Cardinal Mindszenty, the world-famous Hungarian emigrant, in Rome on Monday. The paper's editor says the Card-inal is expected to travel to the Holy City from the Vatican guest house in Rome in April. The Austrian publication, which claims to have had exclusive information, says that Mindszenty will be in Rome for at least two weeks, perhaps longer. The Cardinal is scheduled to return to Budapest after the visit.

While in Rome, Mindszenty is expected to meet with Vatican officials and possibly with Pope Paul VI, who is currently in Paris. The paper also reports that Mindszenty will deliver a series of talks on human rights issues during his stay in the Eternal City.

During 1963, one out of every seven people in New Jersey was covered by a certificate to have a hospital bill, accompanied by medical or surgical expenses.

This unexpected expense could prove a serious hardship unless there is Blue Cross-Blue Shield protection to absorb all or most of it.

You're in a job category that is not covered by group protection, wouldn't it be wise to carry this necessary protection on your own?

Don't wait... and then say, "I wish I had taken Blue Cross-Blue Shield." Have it when you need it! You save it in your family. Apply today.

Cuba In First Person

The major shortcoming is a failure to make comprehensible the background of the story, the title: "The love story of how the Revolution took over Cuba." The author tells us what happened, but we really need to know why it happened and why it continued to happen, even after all these years. The result is unsatisfactory. We remain at the same point as the author; we are led to ask why.

The author went to Cuba in 1959, the year of the Revolution. He and his wife had a friend in Cuba who had been there for years and who was able to give the author a firsthand account of the events. The author went to see the friend and was not disappointed. He was able to interview the friend and the friend's wife, who was a writer for a Cuban newspaper. The interview was quite enlightening.

Nuclear Warfare

The Question Mark

Arguments Given For Banning Bomb

Argentina and Cuba are two countries in Latin America which have been face to face with a nuclear threat. In Cuba, the threat has been in the form of a threat of a military invasion by the United States. In Argentina, the threat has been in the form of a threat of a military invasion by Brazil.

The President of Cuba, Fidel Castro, has recently announced that his country will not surrender to any pressure, and will continue to resist any attempt to force it to accept a nuclear weapon. He has also announced that his country will not allow any other country to establish a military base on its soil.

Argentina, on the other hand, has been facing a similar threat from Brazil. The Brazilian government has recently announced that it will not allow any other country to establish a military base on its soil.

The two countries have a history of mutual suspicion and hostility. They have been involved in several conflicts in the past, and there is a strong possibility that a conflict between them could erupt into a nuclear war.

It is important that the world community recognize the threat that these countries pose to the peace and stability of the region. The United Nations and other international organizations should take steps to prevent any military conflict from breaking out in the area.

The world community should also work towards a solution to the underlying political and economic problems that have led to this crisis. The United Nations should use its influence to bring about a peaceful solution to the conflict.

Reds Envision "Perfect Society"

By: JOHN F. BURZI

The Communist Party of China has long envisioned a "perfect society" in which all people would live in harmony and equality.

In this "perfect society," the state would own all means of production and distribute goods according to need, not ability. The state would also provide education, health care, and other social services to all citizens.

The Communist Party has been working towards this goal for many years, and it has made some progress. For example, it has dramatically reduced poverty and inequality in China.

However, there are still many challenges to overcome. The Communist Party must continue to work towards a more just and equitable society in China.

The "perfect society" envisioned by the Communist Party is a utopian ideal, and it is unlikely that it will ever be fully realized. However, the party's commitment to public welfare and social justice is an important aspect of its ideology, and it is worth supporting.

North Victoria Incident

The townpeople of North Victoria are bringing out an unusual, if not unique, experiment. The community is being run by a parson and his parishioners.

The experiment is being conducted by the Reverend Thomas Keller, a priest who has decided to run the town as a religious community. The townpeople have been encouraged to participate in various activities and services, and they are encouraged to follow the principles of the Bible.

The experiment is being watched closely by many people, and it is expected to be a valuable experience for the participants.

Despite the unusual nature of the experiment, the townpeople are enthusiastic about it, and they are looking forward to the future of their community.

TV Economics Panel
Fal ters in Discussion

By MURR GEORGE, B. ROSS

Director, Social Action Dept., NCFE

Recently the Columbus Brochures Forum held a panel discussion centered around the theme of "The Confidence of the Common Man and the Economic System." The forum was open to the public and the audience was made up of interested laymen as well as economic experts.

During the discussion, a panel of economic experts were featured. Each panelist was given an opportunity to state his views on the question of the confidence of the common man and the economic system. The discussion was open-ended, allowing for a variety of perspectives to be heard.

Some panelists argued that there was a crisis of confidence in the economic system, while others believed that confidence was still high. The discussion concluded with a question and answer session, where the audience had the opportunity to ask questions and share their own thoughts on the topic.

The panelists included economists from various backgrounds, including those from universities, government agencies, and private businesses. They brought diverse viewpoints to the table, making for a rich and engaging discussion.

The forum was a valuable opportunity for both laymen and economic experts to exchange ideas and gain a deeper understanding of the confidence of the common man and the economic system.
Brother Recalls Pope as Scholar

BERGANO, Italy (AP) - Gerard Renoult remembers his brother, Pope Paul VI, as a man who lived in the village of Rocca Rfo and a shepherd who had to leave his life to become the 265th pope to the worldwide Catholic Church.

"He was very religious," Renoult said in an interview Tuesday from his home in Rocca Rfo. "He was very simple, and he had a profound religious spirit."

Renoult said that his brother always had an extraordinary energy, which was able to inspire others and to unite people.

According to the brother, Pope Paul had a deep affection for the poor and for the people of his own country. He also emphasized his brother's dedication to the poor, saying that when the two got together near a river the Pope was always in the company of the poor and always expressed his love for them.

What Is a Vocation?

By MSGR. WILLIAM F. FURHAN
Director of Vocations, Archdiocese of Newark

According to a recent report, "One-half the number of boys who enter the seminary are not interested in the priestly vocation at the time of their admission. They are not sure. They do not know what they want to be."

This is a sad picture, but it is not as bad as it seems. The problem lies in the fact that too many boys are not sure what they want to be. This is not the fault of the boys, but rather of those who have been responsible for their education. The Church has a great deal to answer for in this matter.

In the past, the Church has been too quick to urge young men to the priesthood. This is a mistake, for it is not a good idea to press young men into the priesthood. If the Church is to have a large and effective ministry of priests, it must be willing to wait until the boys are sure of their vocation.

One of the most important things that the Church can do is to make the vocation of the priesthood a real and living thing. This can be done by making the seminary a place where young men can learn to be priests. The seminary should be a place where young men can learn to live the priestly life.

We must remember that the vocation of the priesthood is not a thing to be forced upon young men. It is a thing to be encouraged and helped. The Church must work to make the vocation of the priesthood a real and living thing, and then young men will be willing to accept it.

Vocation Supplement

They Say, ‘Don’t Do It’

By REV. JOSEPH M. BARBER
Director of Vocations, Diocese of Paterson

There are many objections to the priestly vocation. Some people say that it is a boring and monotonous life. Others say that it is a difficult and dangerous life. But these objections are not valid.

The priestly vocation is a life of great responsibility and great privilege. The priest is a servant of the Church and of the people. He is a minister of the Word of God and of the Sacraments. He is a spiritual leader, a confessor, a teacher, and a counselor.

The priestly vocation is a life of great joy and great sorrow. The priest is a minister of the Eucharist, a minister of the Word, and a minister of the Sacraments. He is a minister of the Cross, a minister of the Resurrection, and a minister of the Glory of God.

The priestly vocation is a life of great sacrifice and great reward. The priest is a minister of the Eucharist, a minister of the Word, and a minister of the Sacraments. He is a minister of the Cross, a minister of the Resurrection, and a minister of the Glory of God.

The priestly vocation is a life of great challenges and great opportunities. The priest is a minister of the Eucharist, a minister of the Word, and a minister of the Sacraments. He is a minister of the Cross, a minister of the Resurrection, and a minister of the Glory of God.

The priestly vocation is a life of great work and great reward. The priest is a minister of the Eucharist, a minister of the Word, and a minister of the Sacraments. He is a minister of the Cross, a minister of the Resurrection, and a minister of the Glory of God.

The priestly vocation is a life of great and eternal reward. The priest is a minister of the Eucharist, a minister of the Word, and a minister of the Sacraments. He is a minister of the Cross, a minister of the Resurrection, and a minister of the Glory of God.

Of the Need for More Priests

NEWS has broken

The number of U. S. Catholic priests now totals 19,523.
Bishops have been issuing a Call to the Priesthood for the past three years. However,

8,000 more priests are needed compared with 1954. This is a total increase of 70%.
By the Catholic Bishops, the National Conference of Bishops, in May last, recommended an increase of 3,850 priests.

What this means in practice is evident from the figures in the national Catholic population. In 1943, there was one priest in every 482 Catholics. In 1952, there was one priest in every 341 Catholics. This means that every Catholic was served by a priest.

A Thousand Children to Love

"I think Mary Ann was the eighth grade girl. She was born at a closed Catholic orphanage in Poland. When she was five years old, she was taken to an orphanage in Italy, and then she was brought to the United States when she was ten. She learned English very quickly and was soon able to make friends at school. She was a very kind and thoughtful girl and was always ready to help others."

BEFORE she joined the Felician Sisters of South America, Sister Mary Ann, one of the children, used to think she'd like to work in the hospital. But at the time she entered the Oregon facility, the entrance of the St. Joseph's Hospital was still closed. The sister decided to stay with the community, and she became a professor at the Oregon State University. She taught English, history, science, and health care to Polish and Italian students. Sister Mary Ann was working on her doctorate in children's education.

SHE NEEDS her children's education degree to continue her training. She is also working on a degree in education, and the other children in her family are working on a degree in education as well. She is very proud of her children, and she knows they will be successful in their careers.

BY THE TIME she graduates, she will have completed her education degree in children's education. She is also working on a degree in education, and the other children in her family are working on a degree in education as well. Sister Regina Michael spent a lot of time with the children. She was very kind and thoughtful and was always ready to help others. She was a very good role model for her children, and they all looked up to her. She was a very hard worker and was always willing to help others.

JUBILARIAN SAYS: "Train Your Sisters and They Will Do the Work"

Says:

Society.

Jubilarian Patricia was armel lumboll's scholar. The Jubilarian program was established in 1957 to assist the Sisters in their work. This year's Jubilarian, Sister Patricia, has been active in various ministries.

Sister Patricia was born in County Dublin, Ireland. During her years as a novice, she was a member of the St. Joseph's Novitiate in Rockleigh, New Jersey. She has served in various capacities throughout her religious life, including pastoral care and educational administration.

The Jubilarian program is designed to recognize and support the contributions of Sisters who have dedicated their lives to religious service. Sister Patricia's work in education and pastoral care exemplifies the spirit of service that the program seeks to celebrate.

Sister Patricia's dedication to her work is an example of the commitment of all religious men and women to serve others in the name of Jesus Christ. May her example inspire others to follow in her footsteps and continue to do the work of the Lord.

Studying Intolerance

— GENEVA, Switzerland (NSC) — Questions of religious and cultural discrimination in the religious communities of Russia have been under review by the United Nations Human Rights Commission since March. A major item on its agenda is whether Russia is a party to international human rights standards. The commission is also considering the possibility of holding a special session on the subject of religious intolerance.

A major focus of the U.S. is the question of religious and cultural discrimination in the religious communities of Russia. Since 1961, when the United Nations
Human Rights Commission began its work, it has been studying the question of religious and cultural discrimination in Russia. In 1962, the commission held a special session on the subject of religious and cultural discrimination.

In January, a subcommittee met to consider the question of religious and cultural discrimination in Russia. The subcommittee was asked to study a report submitted by the communist government of Russia to the commission.

The report, entitled
"Religious and Cultural Discrimination in Russia," was submitted by the Russian government to the United Nations Human Rights Commission in February. The report states that "the Russian people are free from religious and cultural discrimination." It also states that the Russian government is committed to the principle of equality before the law for all citizens, regardless of their religious or cultural beliefs.

The commission will consider the report and make recommendations to the United Nations General Assembly. The commission is scheduled to meet in its next session in March.
