Wisconsin Religious Organizations Lose Liability Immunity

MADISON, Wis. (NC) — The Wisconsin Supreme Court has held that the doctrine that limited religious organizations' liability to suit for negligence in schools and other institutions serving the public was no longer in effect.

The decision reversed a tradition of more than a century's worth of legal precedents, and is expected to result in a large increase in the number of legal suits brought against religious organizations.

Holy Trinity Catholic Church, located in Madison, had been listed as a defendant in a lawsuit brought by a parishioner who was sexually abused by a priest when he was still a child.

Lawyers for the church argued that the Supreme Court should continue to apply the doctrine of religious liability because it would help protect the institution.

"The doctrine of religious immunity is a cornerstone of our legal system," said lawyer John Thompson. "Without it, we would be forced to confront a wave of lawsuits that could overwhelm our courts.

"We urge the court to reconsider its decision and continue to apply religious immunity," he added.

The court's decision was based on a broad interpretation of the Wisconsin constitution, which grants religious organizations a form of immunity from liability.

"The Legislature has not granted religious organizations immunity from liability," said Justice John Smith. "The constitution does.

"We cannot create a new constitutional provision ourselves," he added.

The decision has been welcomed by religious organizations, who have long argued that they should not be subject to the same legal standards as secular organizations.

"We are pleased that the court has recognized the unique role that religious organizations play in our society," said Rabbi Sarah Green. "Without immunity, we would be forced to close our doors.

"We are grateful for the court's decision," she added.

The decision has also been criticized by legal scholars, who lamented the court's decision to forgo a more balanced view of the issue.

"The court has ignored the weight of legal precedent and the overwhelming consensus of legal scholars," said Professor John Smith. "They have ignored the fact that religious organizations serve a unique role in our society.

"The court's decision is not only wrong, it is unconstitutional," he added.

The decision is expected to have a significant impact on the legal landscape in Wisconsin, and is likely to be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Fat, Dumb and Happy

The best known and most published of the satirists, John H. Glenn Jr., has proven to be a man of many talents. He is well versed in many fields besides writing, including speaking and acting. He has a keen insight into the human condition and is not afraid to express his opinions. His work is not only funny, but he also manages to make a serious point. He is a master of wordplay and is not afraid to use language in a way that is not always politically correct. His work is a celebration of the human spirit and is not afraid to tackle controversial topics. His work is a testament to the power of the written word and is not afraid to use it to make a point. His work is a reflection of the times and is not afraid to speak out against the establishment.

The real world is a place of chaos and confusion, where people are often at odds with each other. The human condition is a struggle and it is not always easy to find meaning in it. But through his work, John H. Glenn Jr. helps us to see the humanity in all of us and to recognize the commonalities that we all share. His work is a reminder that we are all in this together and that we must work together to create a better world.

Husband's 'Sociability' Fault
May Be Wife's Fault

By REV. JOHN A. THOMAS, S.J.
Assistant Professor of Sociology, St. Louis University

How do you deal with a warm-personality? My husband and I get along well as long as we can meet up to a party or a dance. Then if he tries too much to drink, he starts chasing somebody's wife or girlfriend. I've come to feel that our marriage is doomed because I'm not important or special to him. Now I have no desire for him, and I can't help it. I've watched him with some other women lots of times to feel that my husband is sociable

I have been asked and hurt by your husband's affection. His first relationship is to be found in the thrill of a new relationship, for those who are not satisfied, they would be interested in you. And that woman just

Studying the ‘Other’ Encyclical

THE CHALLENGE of Matthew Stead, editor of The Advocate, to his readers to study Pope John Paul's encyclical, "Centesimus Annus," is the focus of this year's May 8 issue, according to Editor and Publisher Thomas A. O'Connor. The Advocate plans to devote a special issue to the encyclical, with articles by various guests and contributors, a major feature being a book review by Thomas A. O'Connor himself.

The Advocate is one of the oldest newspapers in the United States, founded in 1850. It is a weekly publication with a circulation of over 100,000 copies. The paper is known for its coverage of local news and events, as well as its editorial stance on various issues.

In addition to the book review, the Advocate will feature a series of articles on the themes of "Centesimus Annus," including essays on the encyclical's relevance to contemporary social issues and its implications for Catholic social teaching.

The Advocate is headquartered in New York City and has a long history of advocacy for social justice and human rights. It is known for its commitment to providing a voice for marginalized communities and for its role in shaping public opinion on issues of national importance.
Pope Discusses Social Peace

VATICAN CITY (AP) —

The Pope set out today on a five-city tour of Africa, which is the first time a pontiff has visited the continent.

The Pope said in a speech to the media that he was looking forward to the tour, which is expected to last for a week. He added that he was eager to meet with the leaders of the various African countries he would visit.

The tour will take the Pope to Kenya, Tanzania, and South Africa, among other countries.

Meanwhile, in Rome, the Vatican announced that it had reached an agreement with the Italian government to allow Catholic priests to perform civil marriages.

The agreement, which was signed by Vatican Secretary of State and Italian Foreign Minister, will allow priests to perform marriages in civil registration offices, as long as the couple has obtained a civil marriage certificate.

The agreement was seen as a significant step in the Vatican's efforts to modernize its relationship with the Catholic Church.

In other news, the Vatican's Holy See Press Office released a statement today, announcing that Pope Francis had appointed a new head for the Vatican's Holy See Press Office.

The new head, a Jesuit priest, will be responsible for overseeing the Vatican's media operations, including the Holy See Press Office and the Vatican Radio.

The appointment is the latest in a series of changes made by Pope Francis to reform the Vatican's media operations.

The Pope has also announced plans to create a new department within the Vatican's Holy See Press Office, dedicated to the coverage of the Holy See's diplomatic relations with other countries.

Island Mission Near No. Korea
Will Soon Have Dispensary

KANGANDI (The small U.S.-called Kiang-nan in the Yellow Sea will soon have a new archdiocese under Archbishop John of Faullu, N.J. See previous story, p. 11. Here, we will set up the dispensary with the help of Msgr. Munn of St. Joseph's Seminary, Yonkpon, Korea.

KANGANDI, Island, located in the southwestern part of the South China Sea, is a small island. About 50,000 people live there. In about 1890, Father Giuseppe, a Capuchin, went there and opened a dispensary. His successor, Msgr. Munn, has continued to assist the islanders through a small dispensary. The islanders are engaged in various activities, including fishing and agriculture. They have a population of about 50,000 and are served by a small group of Catholic missionaries.

HUNGER IN THE HOLY LAND
In this column, we feature news items from the land of the Holy Family, and the issues that affect the poor and hungry in the Middle East.

The Holy Land is a region of the world where Christianity, Islam, and Judaism have a long history. It is home to the Jewish Holy Land, which is the West Bank and Gaza Strip. The region is also known for its rich cultural heritage, including its ancient ruins and beautiful landscapes.

The region has faced many challenges in recent years, including political instability and conflict. Despite these challenges, many people in the region continue to live in poverty and struggle to meet their basic needs.

These are some of the issues that we will cover in this column:

- Poverty and inequality: The region has a high level of inequality, with many people living in poverty and struggling to meet their basic needs.
- Conflict and displacement: The region has experienced conflict and displacement, with many people being forced to flee their homes.
- Access to basic services: Many people in the region lack access to basic services such as healthcare, education, and clean water.
- Climate change: The region is also facing the effects of climate change, with rising sea levels and increased droughts.

We will cover news items from the region, as well as feature stories about the people who are working to address these challenges.

Tuition Raised
At St. Peter's
JERSEY CITY — St. Peter's College has announced a raise in tuition of $25 for the academic year of 1964-65, making the total $550 under the new rates. The raise is effective immediately.

Rev. Leo McGuirk, S.J., acting president, said that the board of trustees made the change "after considerable deliberation. Tuition at the school was $525 last year and $500 this past year. It went from $500 in 1958.

Award Winner Says:
Pope Leo's Encyclical
Still Lives in 1963

First Annual Father Leo Award at St. Peter's College was presented to Pope Leo XIII, a papal encyclical which the present Pope's encyclical, "Rerum Novarum," is based on.

Pope Leo's encyclical, which he printed and called for the cooperation of capital and labor toward mutual control by capital instead of without it, was issued in 1891.

Method agreement results in poorer industry and good wages, as it was guided the encyclical in forming. We believe that better working conditions are reached by a mutual understanding and cooperation than by mere paternalism. This provides a "base' victory for the nation. This movie was lead in 1963 to the education of the nation in the encyclical's message. The nation is a mutual understanding and cooperation, based on the interests of all parties concerned. Further, it is a base' victory for the nation. Therefore, a base' victory for the nation.

A SECOND basic reason is that it is a reasonable request the employer to employers in protecting the workers' right to form unions. The encyclical speaks of the right of the workers to unionize and to bargain collectively.
